

the house, sits in his favorite mod chair and picks up his guitar. How lucky can we be! Hey, who's that coming up and kissing David on the cheek? Oh, it's only good ol' Heesh. Sam came to join the fun, too, but he's shy and decided to just rest on the soft shag rug next to his master's feet.

Although a lot of David's time is spent working, he tries to read a good book whenever he gets the chance. It must be nice snuggling up to a classic on that comfy-looking chair. Or David can just sit there and daydream—or maybe just watch the flame flickering in his fireplace, side by side with a special girl on a chilly evening.

We were just wondering where David goes when he's got problems on his mind—where he goes for complete solitude. David answers our question by showing us a corner of the house that we find really beautiful. There's a low, stained-glass round window on one wall. David explains that he often sits in this corner and meditates.

Sorry to say, our visit with David Cassidy is over. Time now for the "thank yous" and "goodbyes." Hope you enjoyed your visit—MOVIE LIFE did.
