

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED WHEN BOBBY SHERMAN

What happens when your two biggest idols get together for a chat? What do they talk about? How do they get along?

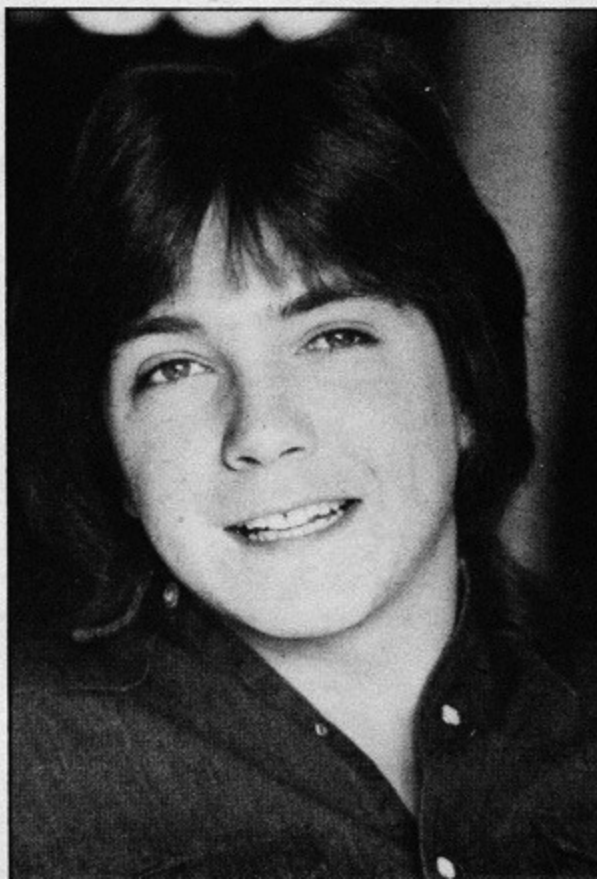

These are some of the questions that were answered when David Cassidy and Bobby Sherman met for the first time.

The meeting took place when Bobby was guest star on "The Partridge Family." Although Bobby and David had heard a lot about each other, they had never met until the day on "The Partridge Family" set when they started work on the episode of the show which would also be a pilot for a possible new series for Bobby.

There was no great rivalry between them, as some people had predicted. They got along together fantastically, mainly because they have so much in common.

"We had a lot to rap about," explains David. "We have a lot in common. There was always the underlying thing when we were talking to each other, that I am one of the only people who can understand the way he feels and he's one of the only people who can understand the way I feel, 'cause he's been through it.

MET DAVID CASSIDY!

"It was nice talking with him because a lot of things I didn't even have to say. There are a lot of things that go unsaid when you're talking to someone who understands so well."

They talked about many things during the week they were together. They treated each other as equals—neither offered advice to the other.

"We talked about Japan a couple of times," David recalls. "He told me about that, about how I probably won't like Japan. It's too smoggy and crowded and the fans chase you for 80 blocks and you really have to run, he said. He said you just can't get away from them and it's pretty hectic.

"And we rapped about music. I knew he was producing and that's something I want to get into doing. And we talked about his having his own studio."

Neither David nor Bobby seemed too surprised by the other. Each was pretty much as they had expected. The week went by pretty fast and at the end they were friends, not super close friends—they
