

DAVID WELCOMES YOU TO HIS VERY PRIVATE HOME IN THE HILLS!

And something else it is! It's spacious and comfortable—the sort of place where you can take off your shoes and sit on the floor.

From the living room, you can look out onto the front yard and pool and out to the fantastic view—all of Hollywood lies below.

Sharing the house with David is the same crew from his last place—David's dog Sam, his roommate Sam and Sam's dog Sheesh.

Sam, the dog, is turning into quite a ham. It seems whenever anyone wants to take a picture of David, Sam always manages to get into the picture. David thinks maybe he wants to be a star, too.

David challenges you to a game of pool and on the way to the poolroom you discover that the funny-shaped hall has a sky light that lets light fall in from above. Looking around at the shape of the hall, you kind of get the impression that perhaps originally there were two houses or a house and a garage or something and that when someone joined it all together for one house this weird hall took shape.

You soon discover that David's not much better at pool than you are, but he says he's learning fast now that he has his own table to practice on, so next time—watch out!

As he walks you out past the garage, you notice that although he's got a fantastic new home, he's still driving the same dirty blue Mustang!

But that's the way David is—he changes a little but he also stays the same a little—and he's always one of the greatest guys around.
