"He's really talented! His voice—his looks—his acting ability—he has it!

"Dating David is really a wonderful experience. He's so intelligent that I'm always learning something from him. He loves exchanging ideas and philosophies and with David, you never want for something to talk about. He's a complete gentleman and when you're with him, you really feel like a lady. He respects girls—and he's not embarrassed to show it."

Judy's family is typically, warmly Italian—"I don't know anybody on my father's side, they're all in Italy!" she laughs—and is also typically close-knit. ("When my sister got married, there were close to 300 people and 200 of them were definitely family!")

"My family's really beautiful," she added. "They're really good to me, and I more or less help them out. That's why I still live at home. My father's retired—I'm the baby of the family, and I'm kind of all they have left . . ."

But there are relatives by the housefull! "My mother's from eleven children, and I have 40 first cousins! There are about fifteen that are my age, and we always get together . . ." She made it sound like every family gathering is a party: "Besides our own friends, we have each other's friends . . ."

How David Cassidy, who spent much of his childhood with his grandparents, and later as an only child lived with his mother and step-father, must love the affectionate closeness of Judy's friendly family! When I mentioned this to Judy, she said, "It's very easy to feel comfortable with my family, because they're warm people and there are just so many of them. I think if he had more time, he might—but he has the busiest schedule of anyone I know! When he is not working, he is recording! When he is not recording, he is doing a lay-out! When he's not doing that, he's traveling, you know—doing promotions!

"David hasn't much time for social life," she added, laughing. "You know, David called me about three months ago and said, 'Guess what, Judy! We're engaged! One of the columnists said we're engaged, and we're going to get married at any time if we haven't eloped already!' And we just started laughing. We thought it was hysterical. We hadn't seen each other for several weeks, because we'd both been so busy!"

Then, "I do see David—but I see others . . ."

Much as their eager fans would love to see it happen, these two level-headed kids aren't going to plunge headlong into anything more serious than the fun and pleasure of dating . . . yet! But they're a mighty fetching couple, and when Italian eyes are flirting and Irish eyes are smiling, it begins to look as though the 'eyes' have it. And this just could be the big romance for David and Judy.

Judy is deluged with fan letters, most of them stressing the same theme: "Everybody just wants to see David and me together," she says with a smile.

Romance is on every pretty girl's mind, but when I asked Judy if she was thinking about marriage, her answer was quick: "Marriage? As a person, I'm not mature enough. I don't really think I could handle it. When I get married, I want to make it work—I'm not going to rush into it, even if the right person does come along. No . . . I'm not thinking about marriage. It's the last thing from my mind . . ."

"We're good friends and we have fun with each other," she pointed out, with a big smile, and added, "Like me, most of David's friends are not involved in show business, and he likes the idea that he has a life apart from his work."

Judy is delighted that David's success hasn't changed him. "It hasn't affected him—not at all!" She told me about one memorable occasion that proved David is just as vulnerable, just as responsive to new experiences as you or I would be.

"When his series first started, I went to a reception to introduce the first Partridge Family single with him. He didn't know if it was going to be successful or not—his record hadn't been out yet, and I had gone through this with Room 222—so I knew what was going to happen. He said, 'Judy, I'm really nervous. If I hold onto you really tight, don't be up-tight, because I'm very, very nervous . . . You know,' she marveled, "he gets scared just like any of us! It's only human. I think that's the joy of it, if anything exciting happens. If you're always calm about everything, I don't see anything groovy about it."

A lot of "groovy" things are going on in Judy's career life, too, and the fan letters and phone calls are part of them. A special thrill for Judy was when "One fan called me—from New Jersey!—on Christmas. She'd never talked to a movie star before, and it was a Christmas present from her mother, to call me! She was very thrilled about David and me, wanted to know if David and I would do a Partridge Family together . . ." Or a Love American Style segment. Judy would love that. And David?

"I think he'd like to," she smiled. "He told me he'd like to do other stuff—like Love American Style."

She mentioned having been up for parts that required nudity, but said, "First of all, I won't do it! My mother would just die at the thought of it!"

In a way, her family kind of watches over Judy, but "My parents feel that if I don't know by now what's right or wrong, I'm never going to know. So they let me handle it myself, and so far I've been okay. Being young, I really have to be careful," she said. And then grinned impishly. "You know, I'm real fortunate. My brother's in the business and he knows a lot of people. He's kind of rugged . . ." A rugged brother is a handy asset for a pretty girl!

That's the lovely, lucky, pretty-girl-in-a-whirl side of Judy. Another is the knee-socks-and-pigtails-Judy who joins the Room 222 cast in its weekly TV series—and Judy waxes just as eloquent over one facet of her life as she does the other.

Yet a "slip of the lip" almost made her forfeit that important role!

"A lot of kids identify themselves with Room 222," she says, "That's what's so good about it. It's amazing! Young kids really appreciate it. They say, 'How's Mr. Dixon? Is he really nice?' and 'Is Jason really mean?' and 'Boy, he really scares me!' They really get involved!
