DAVID—SHARE MY LIFE

feel neglected," David says.

EVENING DOINGS

Then you'll probably go out for dinner, because David isn't a very good cook. "In fact, I'm the worst," he says. "Although actually I've improved. I've learned how to boil water."

You'll probably go someplace quiet and homey with good food, preferably a place where David won't be recognized. As much as he cares for his fans, he does want to keep at least a little bit of his life private. Besides, after a hard working day, he's really too tired to spend a lot of time talking to people he doesn't know.

"No one likes to have to meet a lot of people at a time when he's been planning to just relax and take it easy," he says.

After dinner, David usually goes back to work for a little while—reading over the next day's script, working on an arrangement or maybe writing a new song. Chances are he'll take some time out to read and answer a few fan letters, too.

Perhaps he'll talk about his plans for the weekend, which will include some scuba diving. "It's really a fascinating sport," David says. "Being underwater is like being in a whole other world!" And if you're a scuba fan, too, perhaps it's a world you'll visit together sometime.

But for right now, your visit with David is almost over. You play one last record, and then it's time for him to take you home. "It's been a wonderful day," David says. And hasn't it?
