

but somewhere along the line, life began to grow sour for him. He ran from it—so far that he couldn't come back.

David could see his friend pulling further and further away, but he was powerless to do anything about it. And at the same time, he, himself, was doing so well that he couldn't help but feel guilty about being so together while his best friend was falling apart.

Not wanting to let his feelings of guilt and failure in the struggle to save his friend eat him up inside, David channeled his despair into the constructive path of coming out strongly against drugs and trying to make an impact on his millions of young fans.

And what does he have to say to those fans? "To those who are hooked, I say that it's better on earth, and that the fight back is hard, but it's worth it. To those kids who are not that far yet, well, there's ways to work things out. It's a cop out to try to escape when there's still work to be done. I just want to stay in, not drop out. I hope the fans I have will work with me." ●

their house in Cheviot Hills, a prosperous but not super-chic area. Phil made it very clear that he would not join Lucille Ball's company in any capacity. He's a gifted young man, from a fine Santa Barbara family, and the offers are many, including one from MGM. "He'll make up his mind about it afterward," says Lucie. "Right now, the wedding and honeymoon are all we're thinking about."

And the wedding was something to think about! It took place in early evening—just before 7 P.M. on Saturday, July 17th, in the beautiful garden of the Beverly Hills estate of Lucille Ball and her husband, Gary Morton. The wedding artfully combined the traditional and the new. The bride and groom stood under an arbor of yellow and white flowers (carnations, chrysanthemums and white daisies) while the Reverend Ray Harris, director of UCLA's Department of Spiritual Care, officiated, reading the letter of St. Paul to the Corinthians, emphasizing that part which reads "... Faith, hope and love, these three, and the greatest of these is love."

The bride took the arm of her father, Desi Arnaz, Sr., as she walked down the aisle. Flowers floated in the rock-edged swimming pool. Dusk had touched the sky. Lucie, stunning in a white gown with long puffed sleeves and high neck, short veil and a bouquet of yellow and white flowers, had as her maid of honor, Wanda Clark, her good friend and her mother's secretary, and as bridesmaids, Lisa Pharrren, Cindy Barnes, Alice Bittingham and Naomi Parry, who were dressed in quaint pinafores of pale yellow. Phil, in brown tuxedo, had Dick Gautier as best man with Lucie's brother, Desi, Jr., Ed Hall, Steven Hitter and Ben Stone as
