

Andy whose knee Chris sat on when Ethel told him."

Another thing that has endeared Andy to the children, is his love of horses. A funny story is told about when Ethel was charged with horse stealing. What happened was, Ethel and young David had come across a sick horse, it had not been fed. Although he lived on the adjoining farm, Ethel—in the interest of humanity took the horse back to their barn. She tried to feed it, but it was too late and he died. The farmer who owned the horse sued Ethel for horse stealing and asked $30,000 damages. The case was thrown out of court, but at the time Ethel's staunchest defender was Andy. When Joe Jr. brought up the farmers technical legal rights, Andy didn't even finish his dinner, he launched into a half hour diatribe comparing it to other similar cases that Andy had researched, at the end of his speech he received a small but telling hand. Andy was in the inner circle of Hickory Hill horse lovers. This allowed him the privilege of using the enclosed jump area, and intimacy with the Paddock crew. A rare privilege for a guest.

In the same manner Bobby Kennedy always used to be available to the children. He was famous for interrupting big government meetings to speak with the children, Andy has made himself available. The most frequent caller is Robert Jr. who shares a mutual interest in Zoology with Andy, they often exchange information and pictures of animals. He is one of the few people who could get through to Andy, even on days when he was taping his TV show.

All these kindnesses have shown the Kennedy children that Andy is the kind of guy they would like to have around Hickory Hill, now it is up to Mom. THE END remembering that Elvis and Tom Jones and several other performers actually lost from five to ten pounds during each performance. If David does that he would look like a scarecrow.

When you add to that the fact that David will have to fly thousands of miles to do his shows you can easily see that it might take a great toll of his strength.

That started us wondering if David is the one to insist he will be well enough to carry out this grueling schedule. We have a feeling that he wants to do it. But where are the advisors and managers all young stars have around them to tell him to take it easy. He is too valuable to take any chances with his health. Surely his mother, who visited him constantly at the hospital, is worried! His dad, Jack Cassidy, must have suggested when he heard David was going on tour a mere month or so after his serious operation that it might be too much for him! Surely Shirley Jones, who plays his mother on "The Partridge Family" and is his step-mother in real life, has added her voice to those who advocated caution!

David is not the only star in Hollywood who has kept going when his body wasn't quite ready for it. From time to time, it has boggled the mind at just how many jobs some of the busiest stars in Hollywood have. Almost all of
