

DAVID CASSIDY'S LOVE LETTER TO HIS MYSTERY GIRL

The thing that would make me most happy," states David Cassidy, "would be to find a girl who would really love me and with whom I could spend the rest of my life. That's what I'm looking for!"

Well, when the girls heard David say that, nothing could have made them more happy. Literally millions of young girls have written to David to tell him that they are probably the one who could make him the most happy. And, while David really likes getting letters from his fans, there is a certain letter that he always looks for out of all his piles of mail. That letter is from the mysterious young lady who has stolen David's heart.

That's right, fans. Although David has kept it a secret from the world, there is one girl who he has really fallen in love with. He thinks about her all the time and often writes letters and songs to her. She lives in his thoughts and because he's such a private person, David doesn't like to talk about her to the public. David is sensitive and he thinks that a thing as sacred as love should be a private thing.

David's special girl lives in his heart. He is looking for a girl who really fulfills the dreams he has for himself and the girl that will be his. Because David has thought so much about what the girl should be like, it's pretty hard for him to find one that lives up to all his expectations. He has written songs to her and letters to her—he knows what he will say when he finds her, but the problem now is finding this very special girl. (Continued on page 59)
