"One shouldn't live just for their children—that's a mistake—but the happiness they give me keeps me going.

"When I get blue, I just go and play with my kids. They're the only thing that can make me feel better."

And her new love?

"It's bringing me happiness but unhappiness, at the same time," she said quietly. "I'm suffering. I'm paying my dues for everything I get. I'm eating my heart out."

Her first romantic hopes were dashed when her marriage to Dean Hall dissolved. She was left with broken dreams and a helpless child. When she married Bill, she dared to hope again, and for a little while the future seemed bright, life was being kind to Jo Ann. But that dream, too, shattered and crumbled to bits around her, left her uncertain of the future, with only her two babies to brighten what was left of her world.

She's a brave girl though. She dried her tears and smiled again. And she's found a new love. Who's to say whether her "little bits of happiness" are really worth the price she must pay for them? "I know what I should do," she says. "And he knows what he should do: Call it off..."

She knows the grief that may be in store for her. She's fought against it from the beginning—and so has he.

"Dear God, forgive me," she whispers. "It's probably going to have to end. But I haven't the willpower to stop it..."

Her piano still pounds out ragtime, but Jo Ann is learning about the blues, too.

DAVID CASSIDY

Kevin introduced me to David. Kevin was working for my uncle in his cleaning store, and one day Kevin took David with him to help on deliveries. They went to places like Andre Previn's house to deliver cleaning, driving a big van. And during the day they came by to see me.

"They had known each other at Emerson Junior High School, but it was during their senior year at Rexford that David and Kevin became super good friends. Kevin and I were going together at the time, and when he and I would get into an argument, David would call me and say, 'Hello, Judy. I heard you and Kevin were in an argument. Would you like to go out with me?'"

"And the thing I didn't know at the time was that Kevin had him do it! He wanted to see what my reaction was—if I would go out with other people." Actually, David would help Judy and Kevin to patch up their quarrels. He had no intention of moving in on Kevin's girl. And to this day, although he and Judy date, they are only friends, not sweethearts.

In fact, David didn't really ask Judy for a date—except to test her fidelity to Kevin—until both were appearing on ABC network shows and Judy was no longer dating Kevin.

It happened when they met at an ABC party in June 1970. Judy was already on Room 222, and David was filming The
