ing as far as work is concerned. He loves the idea of being able to combine acting and music into one job. And his summer concert tour opened up a completely new world. Appearing on a regular series may be very hard work during the shooting season, but David loves the freedom it gives him during the show's frequent vacations from the camera. He's always been a travel bug. Now that he has the money of his own, the time and the real need to rest and relax, he takes advantage of it.

How does a girl fit into all this? That may just be the problem. There may not be a girl who can fit into David's life right now. Not only would she have to appear at the right time and in the right place, she'd have to be the right kind of person—a very special kind indeed. She's out there... and David's going to have a good time looking for her.

BARRY & MAUREEN

Once in, the ocean feels refreshing as you wade through the waves. But Maureen doesn't want to waste a single moment of her free day and she dives right into a wave that's about to break. You watch her glide across the water with a strong, steady stroke and you ask how she learned to swim so well.

"It's quite easy to be a good swimmer," Maureen replies, "if you're in the water as much as I am. I try to spend almost all of my free days swimming with my friends."

The salt water has really made you super thirsty, so you're delighted when Maureen suggests you go to the refreshment stand. As Maureen reads the menu, you notice a strange twinkling in her eyes.

"I'll have a chocolate milk shake," she tells the waitress. Then she quickly adds, "a large one please."

You laugh when she confesses this is one of her worst faults. On some days she can drink a shake between and with every meal!

While walking back along the beach, Maureen notices a few friends and introduces you to them. They make room for you on their blanket and invite you to listen to a new cassette player, one of the girls received as a birthday present. Another girl hands you a carrying case filled with tapes and tells you to select any one you want to hear. You choose Simon and Garfunkel because you know they're one of Maureen's favorites.

By now the sun is beginning to set and there's a slight chill in the air. Maureen stands up, brushes the sand off herself and says, "I really hate to say goodbye but we have to leave." Then she turns and smiles at you. "The day's not over yet. I still have a few more things to do with you."
