

Susan and David are great pals both on the "Partridge Show" and off. She wished him all kind of good things on his trip.

WHY DAVID CASSIDY RAN OFF

By Linda Lawson

■ If there's one thing that spells desolation to the young, it's ISOLATION. And a couple of very popular—but grounded—Partridges have had it. David Cassidy and Susan Dey.

They've literally had to hide out to escape the overwhelming results of the success of their TV series, and it's no wonder they both got the same idea. They'd go to Europe during hiatus! No one would recognize them there. They could do what they liked, go where they liked—free as birds!

They're grateful that fans feel as they do, of course—they'll never stop thinking that. But coping with what their adoration does to every day lives, is something else.

It's like trying to run, in deep water. It's like plodding through quick-sand. A simple trip to the market for a

Both Susan and David were looking forward to making that first trip abroad . . . then something happened!
