

DAVID'S SHOCKING SIN SECRETS! TRUE OR FALSE?

ACCORDING TO A LINE from the famous Broadway musical Kismet—". . . sinning is thinning."

If that's true, one look at gorgeous, sylph-like David Cassidy is all it takes to reveal that this delicious, delightful and devilish doll is probably very, very "sinful!" When David first started on The Partridge Family series a couple of years ago, he topped the scales at about 135 pounds, which is just about normal for his five-foot-eight-inch frame. But as time went by, David slowly and steadily lost weight—and at his last weigh-in, the irresistible "Keith Partridge" rang up a mere 122 pounds dripping wet!

SINFULLY SLENDER?!

What has David been doing and what is he still doing that keeps him so sexily, sinfully slender?! Before we reveal one of David's best kept and naughtiest secrets, here's a little warning. One of the things David Bruce Cassidy loves, loves, LOVES is to appear not just naughty, not just a little bit suggestively sinful—David really digs making everybody think he's the swingiest, farthest-out, "baddest" young man to come along since the infamous Mick Jagger! Most girls don't understand that most boys—especially young men—love to be thought of as seductive, dangerous and even a threat to a young lady's virtue!! Ever since that cad Casanova curtsied low and stole a kiss from the Queen of France, millions of guys all over the world (and throughout history) have been trying to get away with the same thing.

But is David Cassidy really like that?! Is this dashing, super-daring young dynamo—who poses so super-seductively for newspaper and magazine layouts, and openly reveals all his secret sins—really as wild, evil and sinful as he tries to make the whole world think he is?

NO TIME FOR SWINGING!

Sorry to disappoint any of you David-dollies who really get turned on by the bad side of David, but the truth is that all you hear and read about the bad David Cassidy is false. That David gets a kick out of making reporters from the "adult" mags and papers think he is a super-swinging, sophisticated sex-pot is true; but that David—in real life—has neither the time, the ambition or the energy for sinning is also true.

"Every time I get ready to go out and do a little smashing around and kicking up of my heels," David reluctantly confides, "I find I'm just too pooped to make the scene. I just can't do all my work for The Partridge Family, and my recording career and concert appearances—and still have time left over to play, relax, celebrate and date!"

So what David does is—keep on acting, keep on singing and keep on doing those concerts just for you. And if he has a secret sin—and indeed he does have one—it's that he doesn't give David Cassidy enough fun. Instead of indulging himself and all his desires, fancies and wild imaginings, he—instead—indulges you and your desires, fancies and wild imaginings. So if David's sin is anything, it's unselfishness. And no matter what anybody says—including David himself—you just can't help loving him in spite of, or maybe because of, his shocking secret sin!
