

HIS TALKATIVE and this is what I meant by his hiding his shyness so well. When I first met David, I couldn't believe what a chatterbox he was. Then I slowly realized that this was a cover up. As we got to know each other better, he was still as talkative, but not out of shyness. We just naturally talked a lot to each other because we'd become good friends!

HIS CHOOSY but not in a petty way at all. It's just that when David wants to buy a gift for someone he never just rushes out to a gift shop and picks anything up. He'll think about it and go from store to store until he's found a present he feels is suited perfectly for that person. It's his way of showing he cares.

HIS LOYAL because I know that once David is your friend he'll teach you what real friendship is all about! Not that he spends his time sugar-coating your friendship—if you've done something he thinks is wrong, he'll tell you so nicely—but in time he shows you that he respects and likes you as a person—the whole person!

HIS A CLOWN because he loves to laugh! But I've never seen him play a practical joke on anyone—he doesn't care for that kind of laughing. But, if he's flipping through a magazine and sees a cartoon that reminds him of you, you can be sure you'll get it in the mail along with a little note from him pointing out the similarities!

HIS A HUMAN BEING who is very involved with the world and its people. He never forgets the little gestures that mean a lot—a call on your birthday, a flower with a "good morning" note waiting for you—all the little things that tells you that he cares. It would be so easy for him to take things for granted but he never has. Once, he and I were walking back to the set after lunch. He was smiling and I asked him why. He said, "Look around you. There's no reason not to smile..." And you know what? He was right!
