

David sings "Brown Eyes," and then the powerful song, "I'll Meet You Halfway," as he stretches his arms out to the audience. The fans go wild! They, too, reach out their arms to David. Love vibes flash back and forth. David IS love, no doubt about that! To calm them down, David sings the kicky tune, "The Beginning" and follows it up with "My First Night Without You." He's been singing, dancing, moving and grooving for an hour, but he's still full of energy and determined to give his fans a show to remember. "I've Got To Get Out Of This Town" is his next number, then "Love Somebody Like You."

David begins "Cherish" amidst the thunder of clapping and cheering. It's a beautiful love song and the way David sings it, it's enough to send chills up your spine! He looks so handsome and loving up on stage—and he has a way of making his songs seem so personal and intimate, as if they were really only meant for YOU to hear. Then David breaks into "I Think I Love You," his first hit. Do You remember? There is a mixed feeling throughout the audience during this number—everyone loves it, but they also know that it's David's final song. They look at him as hard as they can, knowing he'll be gone in just a few short minutes. And sure enough—David ends the song, takes his final bows, thanks the audience for being so great to him, shouts "You're beautiful! I love you! I love you!" and in another moment he's gone. The stage empties rapidly, the crew moves in to take away the instruments, and the fans reluctantly file out into the last rays of the afternoon sunshine. But no one sees the sun—for most of us, David has taken the sunshine away with him. And also a little bit of our hearts. Goodbye David—until the next time!

David announces that he would like to sing "I Woke Up In Love This Morning," and asks everyone to sing along with him. It's a great song to sing along with and all join in—including little brothers, moms and dads. Even the concert crew surrounding the stage taps their feet and smiles. Wow! How can you feel unhappy at a time like this? The only thing that could make you unhappy is knowing the show is almost over. Then David sings a song he wrote in Oklahoma City in the early spring of 1972. It's called "Two-Time Loser." David sits at the piano to accompany himself on this song. Then he tells everyone that he's going to sing his fave song ever recorded to date: "How Can I Be Sure?" When David sings he closes his eyes and puts so much meaning into each lyric, that you can't help but be carried away by his voice. And seeing David in person is super-special too. He has a way of moving that excites all his fans—it's no wonder they're anxious to join him onstage.
