BOBBY SHERMAN:

"Meeting fans is probably one of the biggest delights of my life, and there was one 5-year-old girl named Dawn who really flipped me out when I met her! She looked up at me with the biggest, most innocent brown eyes and whispered, 'Bobby, you make my heart smile!' Wherever you are, Dawn, I want you to know that your sweet words always remind me of how lucky I am meeting fans like you!"

MICHAEL JACKSON:

"I love to dance, but when I was just learning I couldn't dig dancing in front of lots of people! So when my brothers and I started adding lots of dance routines in our acts, I got nervous. At our first performance that included dancing I thought I really goofed up and made the group look bad! A bashful-looking girl tapped me on the shoulder and told me, 'Wish I could dance like you—you're terrific!' She made my day!"

MERRILL OSMOND:

"When we were first starting in show business, people couldn't tell Alan, Wayne, and I apart. To them, we three looked so much alike they didn't bother to figure out who was who. So the first time a fan recognized me as Merrill was a big thrill for me! When I asked her how she knew which Osmond I was she answered, 'Oh Merrill, I could recognize your smile from a thousand steps away!' I was so flattered I probably grinned for days afterwards!"
