in that long dress, with her hair piled high on her head, didn't you think so?

And did you notice her posture? She walked so straight I thought she made a ruler look crooked. But I guess even models can get tired of standing correctly. During the afternoon, Susan was off in a corner with her friend Jane Joyce, getting a shoulder rub. "I think I've stood too tall for too long," confessed Susan. "There comes a time, when you just have to slump, and in these outfits, there's no room!"

THE ICING ON THE CAKE

About the prettiest sight on the set during this week, was Shirley Jones. She really did look beautiful. Do you remember that dress she wore? It was a lovely, soft, satiny thing, with lace and buttons and flowers... everything a long-ago dress should have. She looked like she belonged on top of a music box... or maybe on top of a wedding cake... or on a lace valentine! Anyway, you get our idea. Sometimes I think jeans aren't the most becoming things a girl can wear!

DANNY AS MR. CLEAN

How do you think you'd feel about trying to keep Danny Bonaduce supplied with clean white clothes for a whole week? Especially when he was going to spend that week working on a dusty back street in the studio, and riding a horse? Well, you can just imagine how Harvey, the wardrobe man of the Partridge Family show, felt when he got orders to do just that!

Harvey and the producers were so sure that there would be trouble keeping Danny immaculate and shiny, that they ordered three sets of clothes for him. One to wear, one to be at the cleaners, and one to be available for emergencies. And guess what? Danny fooled everybody. He kept so clean all week that the crew started calling him "Mr. Clean" and "The Man From Glad." Even his big Stetson stayed clean!

Of course, the big temptation for Danny, was the pearl-handled, silver six-shooter in the white leather gun belt. We have to admit that they had to wipe that clean once in a while, but on the whole, the entire company was shocked by the way our own Dynamic Dan sparkled his way through the episode!
