

The Love Nest David Cassidy's Preparing For That Older Woman

By ELLIOT RICHMOND

David Cassidy may give up the unofficial title of "Most Sought-After Single Male Star" sooner than anyone realizes. Yes, the end of care-free days may be in sight for David—the moment his many ardent fans have been waiting for, each of them secretly dreaming it would be she. Which one of them has been the lucky winner, then? The surprising answer is—none!

David will almost certainly not be choosing from among his young admirers because, in many ways, they are not really in love with him—rather, he may be just the object of their fantasies of love with a superstar.

"The thing that would make me most happy," David once said, "would be to find a girl who would really love me and with whom I could spend the rest of my life. That's what I'm looking for, another human being so important to me that I would want to share everything with her . . . to be with her forever. Sure, up until now I've played the field.
