

from home, making him guess what it was she had brought for him.

Rainy days were special days for Renay and David. During lunch, they would meet in her classroom, sitting at the desks in the back and sharing chocolate cake.

David often thought how much fun it would be if he was in the same class with Renay. He would sit right in back of her where he could keep his eye on her, gently pulling her hair and writing love notes.

GRADUATION WAS COMING

The school year was soon drawing to a close and Renay would be graduating from junior high school into high school. They didn't see each other very much the last two weeks of school. Graduation would soon be here and there was a lot to be done. After school Renay would stay for graduation practice, so David would have to go on without her.

Finally the big day arrived. Renay looked so beautiful to David in her white and lavender dress, with her long hair flowing softly over her shoulders. As she came up to the platform to receive her diploma, her eyes met David's and he knew that the twinkle he saw in them was just for him.

A DIFFERENT SCHOOL

But he also saw in that twinkle her own special way of saying "good-bye," for although they would still be seeing one another, she would be going to a different school next year and making new friends.

David knew that other interests would come into her life in high school and other boys as well, but he also knew that his next year in the 8th grade would be different too, and that he couldn't hold back time or the changes that it brings.

Still, he felt happy for her because she had made him very happy this past year and he knew that he, too, had made her happy in return.

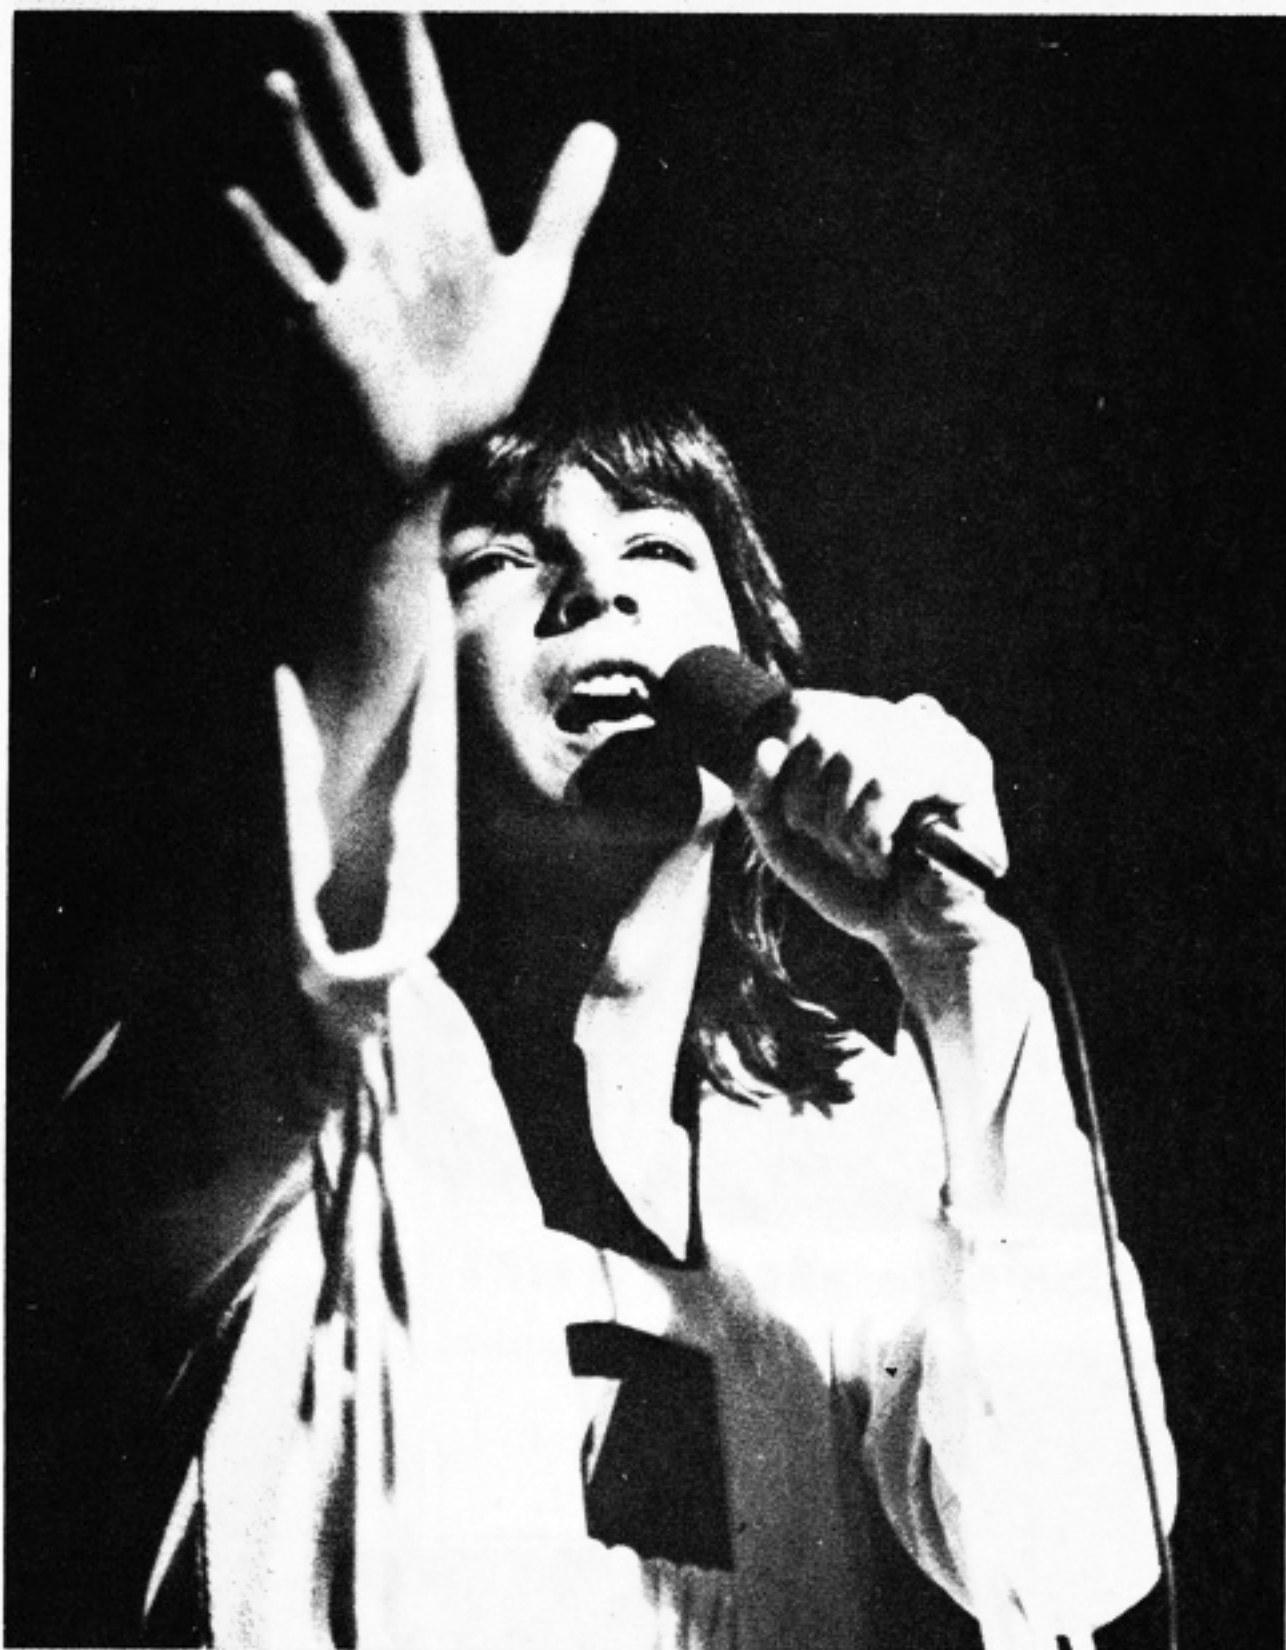

THEIR EYES MET

As Renay took her diploma and walked to the end of the line, her searching eyes met David's one more time. He couldn't see the tears that softly formed a haze over her eyes and he couldn't hear the tremble in her heartbeat. She knew she had to be brave, to have courage and to never let David know how sad she really was to be leaving him behind.
