

Dare-devil Danny Bonaduce is the most difficult of all The Partridges to keep track of. It's hard to tell just what his next move is going to be. Here, he's spending some of his off-camera time doing tricks on his bike. He may say "Look, Ma, no hands!" but Mrs. B. is probably not smiling.

Suzanne Crough sure looks as though she's ready for a touch of mischief. Now that her acting chores for the day are over, she's all set to head for home and get in some play time before bed. Suzanne, a sports-lover, may just be planning to challenge her brothers to a hot 'n heavy football game.

It's hard to keep an active guy like Brian Forster down. When he's not busy in front of the cameras, or studying at the studio school, he can usually be found either fooling around with Danny or enjoying a snack. There's no mistaking what he's doing right now. Drink up, Brian!

IMAGINE being on "The Partridge Family" set as the lights start to dim and the Partridges begin saying their goodbys to one another. Chances are you'd probably be thinking of a million ways you could sneak into their off-the-set lives and find out just what they're like when the cameras aren't around. Well, you can do it—and you don't have to be skilled in the art of espionage, either. The Partridges are inviting you to follow them home, come on along . . .

DAVID

In case you've ever had any doubts about David's warm, outgoing manner, one look inside his home is sure to banish those thoughts forever. In fact, reaching that conclusion is practically guaranteed as soon as David opens the door to his Hollywood Hills hideaway. Since he's immediately greeted by his two pet dogs, Sam and Sheesh, it's impossible not to be impressed by his friendly household. Actually, most of the time his guests are knocked off their feet by it.

"I always warn anyone who's about to cross my threshold to get prepared for plenty of love and action," David grins. "My dogs are really playful and they never take no for an answer. No matter how tired I am after a day's work at the studio, I always dig fooling around with them."

Although David is a true dog lover, he's not the only one in his home who feels this way. His two housemates, Sam Hyman and Steve Ross, are always ready to join in the fun, too. In fact, these three guys have quite a hectic schedule even when they're relaxing.

"I'm not the type who can just sit back and enjoy doing nothing," David admits, "and neither are my two housemates. When we're together there's sure to be something happening, whether it's a game of pool or a dip in the swimming pool in the backyard."

Since Steve plays guitar in David's back-up band, there's plenty of singing and jamming going on all the time. Naturally, David enjoys having a close friend he can rehearse with and:

"If a group wants to sound together, they have to be together," David explains. "The relationship I have with Steve is really ideal and I'd like to achieve the same thing with the rest of the players in the band."

David probably won't have any problems doing just that. His sincerity and outgoing manner wins him countless friends. And his home, which is filled with love and laughter, helps tell you why!

SUSAN

After considering some of Susan's accomplishments in the field of modeling and acting, you'd have to agree that she's certainly an extraordinary person. And her personal life can be described as extraordinary, too.

"I grew up in Mt. Kisco, New York, with my parents, two sisters, Leslie and
(Continued on page 56)