PARTRIDGES AT HOME

Elizabeth, and my brother Tommy. Naturally, when someone mentions home, I automatically think of this place because that's where my heart is."

Since her mother died when Susan was only eight years old, she has her share of both sad and happy memories about home. Actually, one of her most outstanding memories is the way she cared for Elizabeth, who was three months old then. Everyone was amazed at how well Susan managed in this difficult situation. She showed her family that once she made up her mind to do something-she could accomplish just 'about anything!

"When my roommate had to leave the house we shared here in Los Angeles," she says, "my parents were worried about how I would manage alone. But I soon proved to them I would be fine and that I really love it here."

After listening and responding to the call of "lights, camera and action" all day, it's not strange that Susan loves her Hollywood Hills home because it's so peaceful and quiet. Although her two bedroom-two bathroom quarters keep her quite busy, she still manages to find some time for rest and relaxation.

"I love sitting on my patio to read a book or study a script. In the evening, I enjoy listening to classical music, especially while I'm eating my dinner."

On her free days, Susan likes to rise with the sun and waste no time putting on her walking shoes. In fact, she even admits that she's a country bumpkin at heart and could spend hours hiking through the woods.

"Rolling hills, tall trees and green grass awakens the pioneer spirit in me," Susan says with a smile. "I guess that's why I can walk for miles without even realizing the distance I've covered. But when I do-whew-I'm ready to be carried home for the return trip.

DANNY

Keeping up with fast-moving Danny on The Partridge set is difficult enough ... at home, it's next to impossible. As soon as he returns from a day at the studio, he's immediately off and run-

"It's funny," Danny grins, "but my mother has stopped asking me where I could be going in such a hurry. By now she realizes that I'm a runner, not a walker. She's even thinking of posting a speed limit in our home to slow me down a little."

Actually, you haven't really seen Danny in action until you've watched him running across a field with a football in his hands. Naturally, this speed demon is always first choice on every
