CONTINUED FROM PAGE 18

Finally, the girls are all ready, their eyes on the cue man, and everything seems set! This will be it... and Shirley forgets her line!

A BIG PLATE!

David comes over for a minute too, and while we're always particularly happy to see him, it does seem a little unusual to try and hold a conversation with a guy dressed up like a TREE! Naturally, we discuss the problems of conservation.

We're mighty relieved when he explains that the whole thing is a deal out of the script where he and Dave and Dan are trying to hide from the girls... so they try camouflage.

This script isn't designed to David's specifications. He has to eat a big plate of baked beans in it... and beans are not his favorite thing. Not only that, but the director needs take after take on the scene, so he ends up eating beans for about an hour and a half. What price glory?

We tried to get full report on all of David's activities, but that would take another whole column. Just keep looking though, because the way David is traveling these days, he's a cinch to end up in YOUR yard soon.

POISON IVY, ANYONE?

In one scene in the picture, The three "D's" Dan, Dave and David, think they are standing in poison ivy. Which can be pretty funny, as long as the actors can be sure their prop department has provided them with nice, safe, artificial plants.

But the boys aren't sure about the whole thing when in the middle of shooting the scene, the assistant director points to the stuff they're standing in and says... "I hate to be the one to tell you guys this... but that looks like the real thing to me." Our heroes jump a mile. It turns out to be a joke... but don't ask the gentlemen in the story to laugh... they got really scared.

Out of room again! How time flies when you're having fun! Well, at least we were! See you next month—if you're willing!
