

Dave Madden's eyelashes are light too, and they tend to make his eyes look very pale on film due to the high intensity of the lights. So, we use a touch of darker mascara to counteract the work of the lights!

COLOR IS PERFECT

As I started to mention before with Susan Dey, she's got a complexion that any photographer would love. She insists her skin's a bit too dry, but I disagree. She needs no grease stick, no make up base, no powder. Her skin tone, texture and color is perfect for a camera, as well as for the human eye!

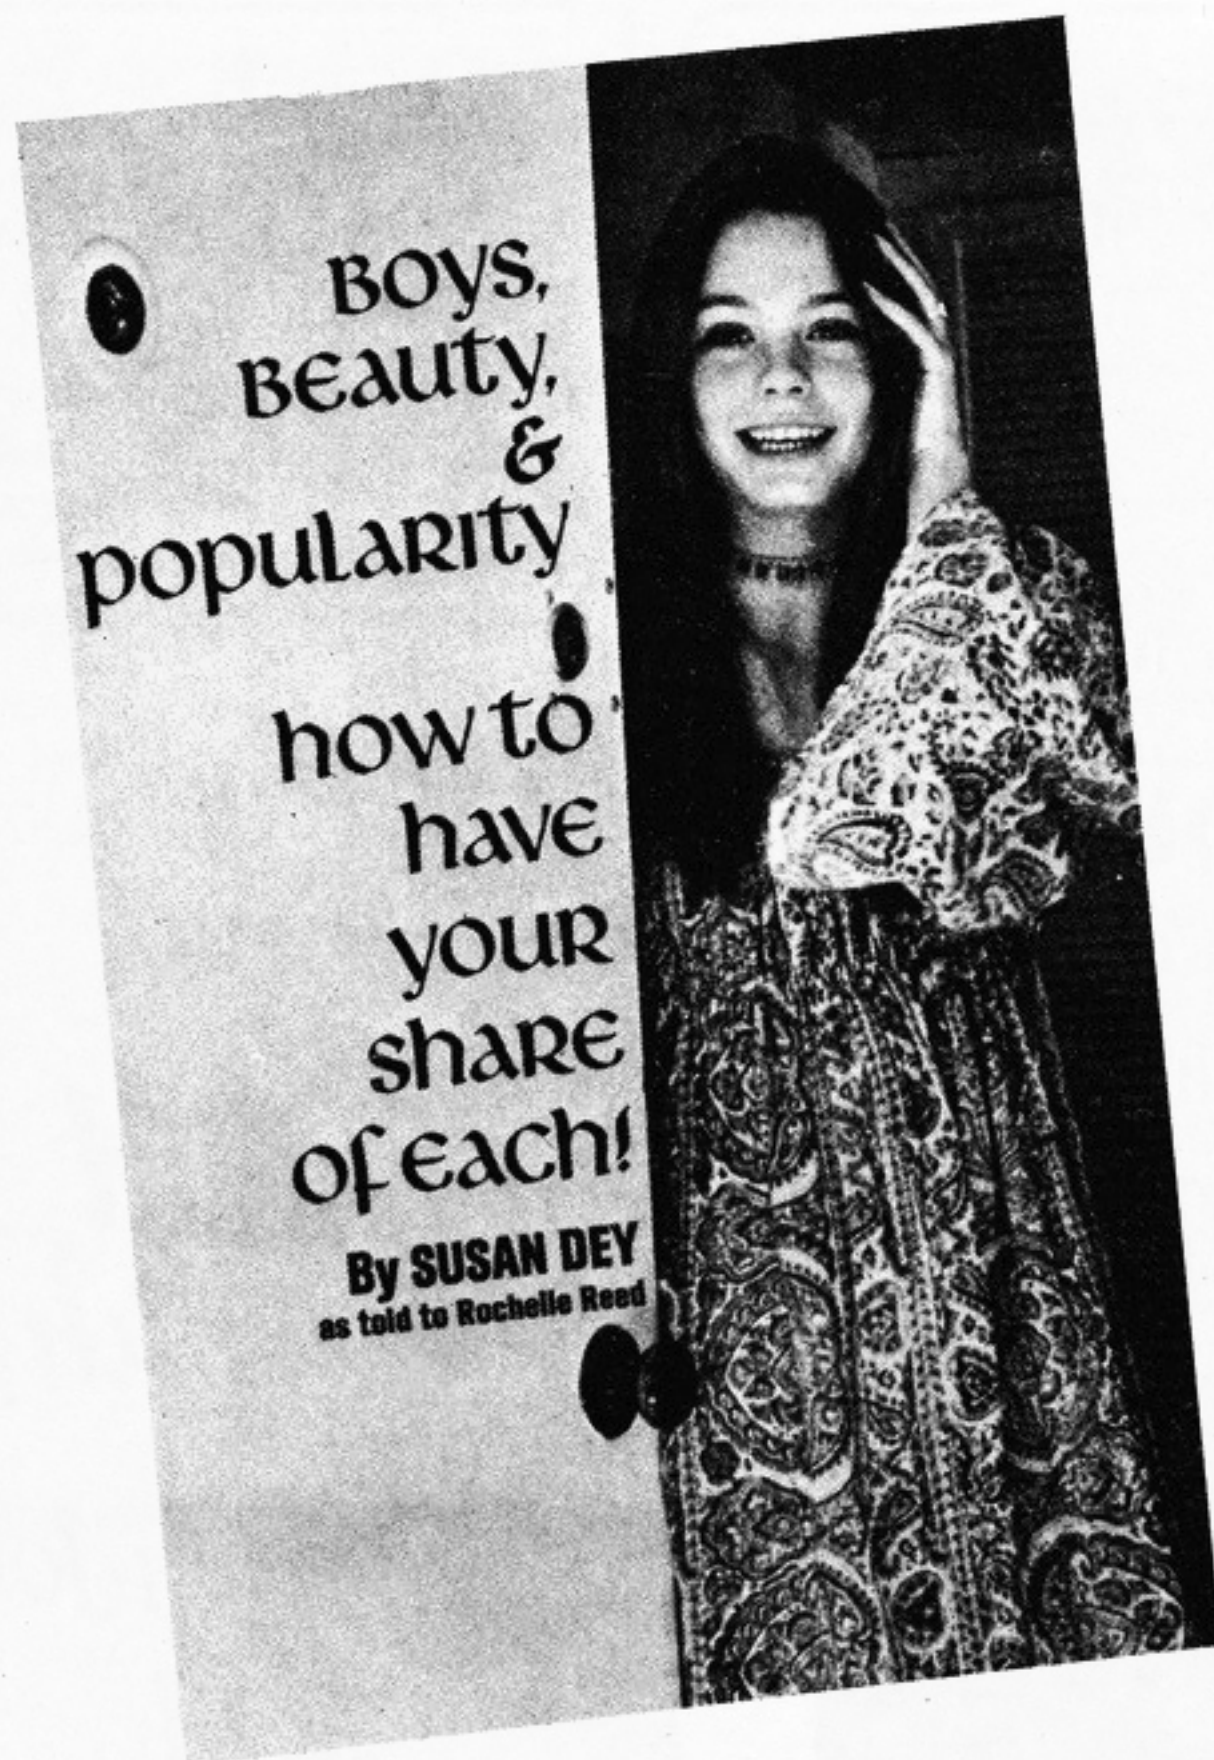

But, like Dave, Susan needs to wear mascara on her lashes—and much more than David does. In true life, just a dab does her beautifully, but once again the lights are at work on her face when she's filming and she needs a bit more.

KIDS ARE KIDS

As for the Partridge "children," they don't wear make up at all. This is because children are children and even if they come across a bit shiny or blemished—that's the way kids are supposed to look!

However, the lights do have an effect on them too! I feel that Danny should wear some make up base because he's excessively fair. But, it would take a full time make up artist just to keep Danny alone in make up!

There are many other little "behind the scenes" make up secrets I'm going to let you in on and I'll try to answer some of your most asked make up problems. But all that's coming next month in the February issue of Tiger Beat's Official Partridge Family Magazine. See you then!
