

The concert is about to start now, so the guards are gently herding everyone away from the stage and back to their seats. Even though you really don't want to go, the guards are so nice about it that you don't make a fuss. The police who were called in specially for the concert are really great—it's the arena's regular staff of ushers who're beginning to blow their cool!

gic Night With David!

But it's David's part of the concert you're really waiting for, and it comes right after intermission! You yell with everyone else when David bounds on-stage and begins his great singing and dancing! He looks so happy to be there, and you swear that he smiled right at you again! Could he have remembered you from before? You're not sure, but one thing you do know is that, sitting there and watching David, you're the happiest girl in the world!