

People ask them questions about their relationship but only David and Susan know the truth. Yet, more than one fan has asked the question "How do they feel about each other?"

"Their Special Of Kind Love."

comfortable silences where neither of them felt the need to talk. They knew what each other was feeling.

Work was more fun because they usually managed to bring out the best in each other in their scenes together. They were learning more about their work with each passing day. And they were also learning more about each other.

GAME NATURALLY

Then, the stories began coming out. "DAVID AND SUSAN TO WED!" "WEDDING BELLS RINGIN' FOR DAVID AND SUSAN!"

At first, the headlines puzzled and hurt them. How could anyone say something so important without bothering to find out if it was true?

David wanted to be certain that Susan understood. He had never said anything to make others believe that they were going to be married. And he knew she hadn't either. But most of all, he wanted to be sure that the stories didn't hurt the special friendship they shared.

And that really was all they shared. It didn't take them very long to realize that they had become friends—very special, and true friends—but, still, nothing more.

Their friendship had come naturally. They never experienced the awkwardness of getting to know one another because they were always honest. With honesty came the comfortable feeling of knowing they didn't have to play games with each other, or put on a show. And then, caring had begun. And it
