

THE KITCHEN in David's new house has a lot of working space!

to greet his tired master. It was Ricky who curled up on his feet at night and kept them warm, and it was Ricky who returned his love with true devotion.

Together they had laughed and played like best of friends and together they had found a companionship that was beautiful to behold between a guy and his dog.

And now, as David stood in the driveway of his brand new house in Encino, he couldn't help but wonder if he was ever to find a "home sweet home."

Slowly he continued up the walk to the front door, the key clutched tightly in his hand. And as he turned it in the lock and put his hand on the knob, he realized that somehow the dampness of the night had disappeared and a feeling of warmth had come over him.

Perhaps this house would become a home—a place he loved to come back to after a hard day at work—a place that would hold the sounds of laughter, music and voices inside its walls.

A smile broke out on David's face as the front door swung open at his touch. Yes, it was going to be different. Had he found a home at last?
