He needs a girl whose lifestyle could blend easily into his. His time each day is so short that she must realize how important their time together is to him. She would also have to be very clever in applying their time together in doing things that would not only amuse him but take his mind off his business and work. But this time would mean nothing to him if it wasn't important to her, too.

COMING SOON?

David used to say that he didn't want to get married until he was in his thirties. I agree that 30 or older is a nice age for a man to get married. He's seen a lot, learned a lot, is relatively settled down, and has a definite idea of the kind of home and wife he wants.

Gee, that last description seems to fit what I just finished telling you all about David! Come to think of it, maybe that wedding day is coming sooner than anybody thought!

David has seen and learned a lot about life for a person his age, is settled down more than others usually are at twenty-one, and has a definite idea of the wife and home he someday hopes to have.

Maybe that marrying age of 30 has been lowered a few years. But then, until it actually happens, we won't know, will we? Let's all just pray that when it does happen, it will be so beautiful for both of them. Right now, the girl David marries could be anywhere and anybody—even You.
