

PART 1 WHERE TO MEET HIM! WHAT TO SAY TO HIM! HOW TO GET HIM TO ASK YOU OUT!

YOU—young, female and kind of unsure of yourself. You wish you were a little shorter or a little taller, a little slimmer or a little less skinny. You worry about your face and your hair and what to wear and what to say and how to talk to your folks and how to tell if a guy likes you and how to tell a guy when you like him.

You love David Cassidy. You know your love is special, not like all those girls who just claim to love him—you really love him. He's in your thoughts 24 hours a day. You go to sleep at night thinking about him, dream about him and wake up thinking about him.

You read everything you can find about him and you feel like you really know him, as a person and not just as a star. You know if you could only meet him you could be such good friends, and maybe more . . .

YOUR KIND OF GUY

You know he is your kind of guy and you think maybe you just might be the kind of girl he's looking for, the kind of girl he dreams about—if only you could meet him.

You gaze at the pictures on your wall and dream about what he'd really be like and what he would say and what you would say and what it would feel like to touch him and how it would feel in the pit of your stomach to actually be kissed by him. And sometimes it all becomes so much for you that you just lie down on your bed and cry.

You love him so much that it hurts, and no one else understands, except possibly your best girl friend. She's the only one you can confide in. She's in love with Donny Osmond so she understands just how you feel. She knows about that feeling of just wanting to burst from the glory of it all!

So you decide, this love you have for him is real and you're going to find a way to meet him and get to know him and tell him about your love and show him how you feel—and so much more. You're going to do it. You're not going to be like all those other girls, just sitting around pretending to love him because he's a star. You're going to show the world that your love is real!

You map out a battle plan, starting with the most important objective of all—to meet David Cassidy! You make a list, which you hide in the secret place in your room that no one knows about, of all the places where he might be, where you might meet him.

MEET HIM IN HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood is the first objective. He spends a lot of time there. You know that he films "The Partridge Family" at the Columbia Ranch in Burbank, California. He leaves his home—that super secret address somewhere in the San Fernando Valley—early each morning and drives his white Corvette through the front gate of the Ranch at the intersections of Hollywood Way and Oak Road. And sometimes if he has time he stops and says hello to anyone who's hanging around the front gate. He signs autographs and poses for pictures and chats a little while before going into work.

He's in there all morning, working, but he comes out again for lunch, usually around one o'clock. He drives back through that same gate and off down the street. Quite often he has lunch at the Yankee Pedlar on Riverside Blvd. Then he comes back through that same gate and works for the rest of the afternoon. Then he drives through that gate one more time at the end of the day. That gate's a good place to be, you think, if you're in Hollywood.

You know that he records almost every evening during the week, and with a little expert snooping you find out he records a lot at Western Recording Studios on Sunset Blvd. in the heart of Hollywood! He arrives there sometime after he leaves the Ranch and he's there until late at night, and sometimes until early in the morning. You wouldn't want to bother him while he's working so hard on those fantastic records of his but you know he has to take a break sometime and maybe if you hang around the room with all the vending machines with coffee and candy and canned foods he might come in. Then sometime later he drives wearily home for a few hours sleep before reporting back to the Ranch again.

WAIT FOR HIM

But the best part comes on Friday evenings—that's when he generally hops a plane for his Friday night concert. Plus he has concerts Saturday and Sunday nights, too—and all you have to do is somehow survive until he comes to perform in your town or a town nearby! That's when you know your best chance is to put your plan into action! Now all you have to do is figure out where he's likely to be when he's in your town. There's the arena where he's going to perform, of
