

STORIES

OF YOUR FAV STARS

MICHAEL COLE

Michael Cole, respected as one of Hollywood's fine young actors, is currently in his fourth season as co-star of "The Mod Squad." Along the way to stardom he worked in a bookstore, a pizza parlor as a dishwasher, as a busboy, a bartender and handyman in a theater workshop. Michael, newly married to Paula Kelly, lives in the Hollywood area. He drives a silver gray Jaguar and likes reading and shooting pool.

BILL COSBY

To support himself during his college days at Temple University, Bill Cosby tended bar at night—and there he found a ready-made audience for his brand of home-grown humor. His customers' enthusiasm convinced him that he might have a chance as a comedian, so he accepted an offer to appear at the Gaslight Coffee House in New York's Greenwich Village, temporarily leaving Temple to do so. The changeable Cosby, who made the transition from comedy monologist to actor in the series "I Spy," now plans to return to teaching in the near future.

TONY CURTIS

Tony Curtis steps naturally into the role of Danny Wilde, the casual but quick-thinking American millionaire in "The Persuaders." In recent years, Tony's carefree attitude towards life has become more and more evident in his roles, including his performance in "The Great Race." In spite of his full schedule, he enjoys getting away and taking long vacations. He believes strongly in the old maxim about "all work and no play . . ." and combines his acting career with his personal interests.

SUSAN DEY

Before being selected for the coveted role of Laurie Partridge, in "The Partridge Family," the lovely Susan Dey was a top junior model, appearing on the pages of "Seventeen," "American Girl," and "Simplicity" magazines. She has also done several television commercials and is very much in demand as a model whenever she comes back to New York City for holidays. When she returns to Mount Kisco, New York, her hometown, Susan loves to go ice boating, sail boating and on outings with her family.

SANDY DUNCAN

Sandy Duncan's childhood was filled with ballet, tap and acrobatic dancing lessons and she made her professional debut at age 12 in a Dallas production of "The King and I." When she is not busy filming "Funny Face," in which she plays Sandy Stockton, a UCLA student and part-time actress, she fills her time with reading, collecting antiques and studying dancing, which she still enjoys tremendously.

