

DAVID: YESTERDAY

Yesterday: "My personal ambition is to be as happy as I can be!"

Today: "I've learned that, sometimes, another person's happiness can be more important than my own. In fact, making someone else happy, makes me happy!"

Yesterday: "The 'new morality' of today's young people—I think there should be more of it."

Today: "I don't dig putting labels on anything anymore. 'New Morality'—what does that really mean? Besides, what I think is good may not mean two cents to someone else!"

Yesterday: "I am a romanticist, but it depends upon whom I'm with and what the situation is!"

Today: "I still cling to letters and souvenirs that mean a lot to me. I guess I'm an incurable romanticist!"

Yesterday: "I really don't like parties much. I prefer quiet gatherings with just a few close, intimate friends!"

Today: "I don't run from big parties anymore. I've learned that there can be thousands of people around, but I can still enjoy just a few people's company. The number of people isn't important, but who those people are and what they mean to me."

Yesterday: "I don't like to sign the word love to things. I really don't know what the word means because I've never been in love."

Today: "I used to be afraid of the word love—afraid of the responsibility love brings and demands. Today, I know that I've been given so much love that it seems so natural and easy to return it to those who care. Love is beautiful and I'm glad I've discovered it!"

Yesterday: "One of the happiest moments in my life was when I got my first acting job! I love acting!"

Today: "If I had to pick the happiest moment in my life, it would be the day I gave my first concert! I'll never forget the feeling—all that love pouring towards me and all those beautiful people caring for me—and more important—me caring for them!"

Yesterday: "Girls. I like girls who are intelligent and who have a good sense of humor."