then, but I've learned to enjoy the role! After all, Keith's thing is music and that's also a big part of my life!

Dear David,

I'm thinking of moving to my own place next year and sharing the expenses with another girl who also wants to share an apartment. This is the first time I'll be living on my own and I was wondering, since you have a roommate, if you could tell me how you like it and what you think the advantages and disadvantages are.

Dear Mary,

The most important thing is if you two get along well with each other. If she's a personal friend of yours and you know each other's moods and whatever then you'll probably hit it off. If you're completely two different kinds, then it might not be so good. Living with another person saves on the rent money and it divides the responsibilities up. The times that you're feeling down, there's someone there to talk to and keep you company. Then there's also the times when you feel like being alone and they are there and annoy you because they're playing the stereo too loud and you want it quiet! There's the times you have to wait for the shower because your roommate got there first and is taking a long time. If you have separate bedrooms and baths it's much better because you can have your own privacy and be alone when you want to. Sam and I get along fine together. We have our moods, but we understand each other pretty well and there's always my own room to go to if he gets on my nerves.
