include a letter from your parents or charity officials, backing up your good intentions), and see if your fave can make a brief appearance. Faves try to attend worthy charitable events but if for some reason he can't, go ahead with the benefit anyway. Your fave will admire you for it.

8. Become a trouble-shooter for your fave's hotel. Call the hotel manager and arrange an appointment. Then present this plan: fans sometimes make a real nuisance when a fave is in town, interfering with earnest visitors. Explain that you could sort out fans from those on hotel business and also keep the fans informed of your fave's up-to-the-minute doings, so they won't suddenly decide to rush the lobby. Guess what? You're hired!

9. Have yourself delivered by Bekins. Find a large trunk with plenty of air-holes, climb in and have yourself delivered to your fave's suite. Be prepared to pay the Bekins bill (about $50) and also have a good story ready for your fave. You'll need it!

10. Win a TIGER BEAT contest. Meet your fave, dine with your fave, visit your fave on the set and write to him when you get home! It's the toughest way—but also the very best way—to meet your fave. Good luck!
