

How to Travel ...and Get Paid for doing it!

How would you like to spend your future in the exciting, romantic, rewarding business of Travel as a Travel Agent or Tour Guide? Picture yourself planning trips... discovering thrilling new places... traveling to far-off lands to see for yourself if the glowing pictures in the travel folders are true. Imagine seeing, exploring and telling others about "The Wonderful World of Travel"—and getting handsomely paid for doing it, too!

How Travel Agents Get Free Travel

People who work full or part time in the Travel Industry enjoy privileges not available to the general public. Travel Agents, for example, represent airlines, steamships, trains, buses and resorts. They are encouraged to try out travel services they can recommend to their customers. They usually travel free, or at greatly reduced rates with transportation, accommodations and food often included. Tour Guides, on the other hand, escort groups of happy people all over the world. Not only do they enjoy being part of a fun group seeking travel and adventure in fun places, but they can earn top money and travel free with all expenses paid to boot. Isn't this the most ideal future you can imagine?

How Can You Qualify?

Now you can turn these dreams of travel and adventure into exciting reality. North American School of Travel's 52-lesson home-study course (approved for Veterans under the new G. I. Bill and accredited by the National Home Study Council) has trained hundreds of beginners at home in spare time for rewarding careers as Travel Agents, Tour Guides or for hundreds of other big money careers in Travel.

- For example, Mrs. Geraldine Yoders, of Florida, who opened her own Travel Agency just one short month after enrolling (and before even completing the course!) reports, "I opened my own Travel Agency the first of August... without the help of your course it would have been virtually impossible." And, Phillip Pinter, of California (who has a full time job outside of the Travel Industry) writes, "I escorted a group of 24 people on a 16-day tour of the Caribbean. The entire tour was very successful because of the detailed instructions obtained from your Travel Course."

These are reports from just two of hundreds of beginners just like you—with no previous experience in Travel—who have found success, excitement and money in "The Wonderful World of Travel."

TRAVEL IS BOOMING!

Travel is actually doubling in dollar volume every five years! Each new day this never-ending growth brings hundreds of rewarding full and spare time job opportunities for men and women of all ages and from all walks of life. Exciting career openings (in every state and overseas, too!) are increasing at a staggering rate—many times faster than people can be trained to fill them. The door is open to you now!

MAIL COUPON for FREE "TRAVEL CAREER KIT"

We have prepared a "Travel Career Kit" for those who are interested in learning more about how they can become a part of this exciting, booming industry. This kit includes a 20-Page Booklet, "Opportunities in Travel," a Sample Lesson taken from our home-study course, plus full details on salaries, free travel, part time opportunities, etc. To get a copy FREE and without obligation, just mail the coupon. There is no cost or obligation to you, now or ever.

MAIL THE COUPON TODAY.

Miss Jane Henderson

North American School of Travel, Dept. 2184B
4500 Campus Drive, University Plaza
Newport, California 92660

I am interested in learning more about how I can travel free... and get paid for doing it! Rush "TRAVEL CAREER KIT" including Booklet, Sample Lesson, plus full details on salaries, free travel, part time opportunities, etc. I understand there is no obligation on my part, now or ever. Rush everything

FREE and POSTPAID.

If under 17, check here for additional guidance information.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____

STATE _____ ZIP _____

over the years. Both have learned to deal with the demands of Hollywood in a much wiser way. The physical attraction for one another was always there from the first, but now Natalie and RJ have acquired a good deal more spiritual responsibility. They are no longer headstrong, stubborn youngsters.

There is no financial insecurity, which they suffered the first time they married. Bob has become a very wealthy man. He has a new Palm Springs hacienda that Natalie helped him decorate. And Natalie has a beautiful home in Bel Air and a second hide-a-way in the Lake Tahoe region of Nevada, a home nestled in the mountains.

And of course, there will be children to bind them this time, not only Natasha and RJ's daughter Kate, but also children they plan to have together. And from their meaningful looks and hints, that could just about be any day now. □ in a neatly handwritten letter, complete with little hearts over the i's, and mails it to him with hopes that out of the thousands of letters he receives each week, hers will be the one he reads. Many people, especially David's contemporaries, may snicker at the legions of teenyboppers who lavish their love upon their idol, but the amazing truth is that these youngsters have made him a superstar, and an extremely wealthy young man, in two short years.

david cassidy

(continued from page 39)

Yet, in spite of his overwhelming success, David was far from happy. "I've worked a long time perfecting my acting and musical skills—on Broadway, off-Broadway, in coffeehouses, on TV dramas—and look where it's landed me," he complained. "Keith Partridge, bubblegum hero. Like I can't even go anywhere anymore." He found it necessary to hide behind dark glasses and a false moustache whenever he stepped out of his house, but even that didn't fool the adoring fans. He was forced to move twice in the past eighteen months because those worshippers who found out where he lived would keep a day-long vigil outside his home hoping to get a glimpse of their dream boy. A young girl who somehow managed to obtain David's phone number would call him in the middle of the night, giggle in the star's ear, and triumphantly hang up the receiver.

"At first, David was overwhelmed with the whole thing," says Shirley Jones, his stepmother and co-star. "Now, the boy lives in a fishbowl." The past two years have been hectic times for 22-year-old David. Thrust into the limelight and onto the covers of ten or twelve magazines each month, he was suddenly robbed of his privacy, of his right to go wherever he wanted and do whatever he wanted to do. People began to say that he was a captive of the teenyboppers and their magazines, but that's only half the truth. In reality, David Cassidy was, and is, a prisoner of his own image.

"I'm not hung up on being a star," he insists. "I want to expand as a person, a human being. My music is good, but it's bubblegum. I can do more. I want to do like George Harrison—that's where it's really at." David wanted to be accepted by his friends, but how could anyone take him seriously when squealing subteens wearing tee-shirts bearing his portrait besieged him wherever he went? The only escape was to alienate himself from the girls who he felt were preventing him from growing as an artist. The answer was Rolling Stones.

David Cassidy is not the kind of star usually featured in Rolling Stone, a super-hip, not-quite-underground newspaper that caters to a select, loyal readership made up mostly of intelligent college students and graduates between the ages of 18 and 30. Finding the Partridge Family star on the cover of Rolling Stone would be comparable to seeing Angela Davis on Calling All Girls. Those Cassidy fans who have been fed on a diet of innocent, simple magazines featuring headlines like, "1000 things David Likes About Girls" would be shocked to read their hero's interview accompanying the nude photo. In fact, those youngsters who unfortunately were able to get hold of a copy of the newspaper were more disturbed by what David had to say than by the daring, frontal nude shot of him with his hands crossed over his chest. Using four-letter words and the blunt language that is expected in a "now" publication, David took sharp blasts at his television program, his records, his managers, and most of all, his fans.

Sadly, if the Rolling Stones spread was on another star—even someone as elusive as Elvis Presley—it would have gone completely unnoticed. Establishment people just don't read Rolling Stone. The language is rough, sort of intellectual locker room, and no subject is taboo. Rock stars like John Lennon and Mick Jagger and film stars such as Jack Nicholson and Barbra Streisand tell Rolling Stone things they wouldn't dare reveal to other publications. But David Cassidy, the high priest of bubblegumland, is not supposed to express adult opinions. He's not supposed to say anything stronger than, "Gee whiz" and "Holy cow." It came as a shocking disappointment to find that the popular idol was a real person.

David has been chastised and attacked from all sides for his nude photo and his frank interview, but it is obvious what his intentions were. Ironically, in an interview earlier this year, he said, "There are a lot of people out there who care. They see me as something. For me to destroy that image would hurt them. I feel a responsibility toward them." The young man apparently had a change of heart. His new motto seems to be, "To hell with responsibilities!" Demolishing the goody-goody, candy bar image, David admitted to taking drugs and smoking pot in his controversial article. That's not much of an example to set for gullible fans.

Yet there are those who say that David acted as he did because he knows that he is losing popularity with the fickle pre-teens. "Like I know they'll get tired of me sooner or later," he recently rationalized. "There are only two or three years to this sort of