

DAVID:

David meets girls wherever he goes—in Europe, in America, all over! But why is it more difficult for him to find love than other guys? What is the special problem David has?

DAVID CERTAINLY is a mover! Not only do his concerts and in-person appearances take him from city to city and country to country, but this season his show "The Partridge Family" is going to be shot on location, as well as in the studio. That means that David will be traveling with the Partridges in addition to touring as a singer.

A few months ago David went to Europe for the first time. To his delight, he found that he was almost as big a star in England as in the U.S. And since the series is shown in Australia as well, David has his share of fans there, too. That means that David is popular on three continents: North America, Europe and Australia. And who knows where his fame will spread in the future?

Yes, David certainly is a mover—and during his moving around he's met an awful lot of people—both guys and girls. He's dated girls in many different cities, girls he has met through friends or through his career. Yet, through all this David groans, "I've a girl in every town—and no one to love!" But what is the real truth behind this startling revelation?

Part of what David says has to do with the impermanence of any relationship he may have with a girl. Say that David has a girl he dates when he's in Chicago. Well, what if David can only get out to Chicago four times a year?

That girl, no matter how much she digs David, can't sit home and wait for him to call long-distance or send her a front row ticket to his upcoming concert in Chicago. Dating David even a few times a year can be fun—but it can also be a drag if that's all your life consisted of. And David wouldn't want a girl like that either because he digs a girl with her own interests, her own purpose in life. Girls whose aim in life is only to sign their name "Mrs. David B. Cassidy" immediately turn him off!

"The only part about my career that's a drag," says David, "is feeling like I'm spreading myself too thin. All my energy has to be channelled toward taping the show, concerts, in-person gigs and, of course, rehearsals for everything. So when it comes down to personal relationships, I have very little time left!" David realizes that in many ways
