PARTRIDGES continued from page 37

him and a wide grin broke out on both their faces.

When Suzanne Crough was first starting in show business, she auditioned for several commercials. Then came an offer to do a toy commercial—but the interview fell on the same day as her birthday. She was torn between celebrating her birthday or putting it off and doing the commercial. However, being the trooper she is, she chose the commercial. When she got home she beamed at her brothers and sisters and said, "This was the best birthday gift I ever could want!"

Brian Forster never has any trouble memorizing Chris Partridges' part. But occasionally he gets a little tongue-tied. He remembers one incident that broke up the other members of the cast. "I was supposed to say 'If apples cost a nickel, how many apples can I get for a quarter' but it didn't come out that way," says Brian. "I kept saying all the variations for it like: 'If nickels cost an apple...' and everytime I flubbed it, I got redder and redder in the face and everybody was giggling because it was really very funny what I was saying. We have fun on the show. I think anyone would like being a Partridge!"

Shirley Jones has three sons with Jack Cassidy, besides her step-son, David. She's always been skeptical of child actors and actresses because she feels they never really have fun. "They're always stuck on the set all day. More often than not they end up in tears because the director says something wrong to them," explains Shirley. However, her oldest son, 14-year-old Shaun, has lately developed an interest in being a performer and no matter what Shirley tells him about the hardships of that career, nothing discourages him. "David's their big brother. They look up to him," Shirley states. "Boy, if I ever wanted to keep my kids out of show business, David did it to me," she laughs.

Dave Madden, plays Reuben Kincaid, the Partridges' manager who has absolutely no patience or understanding of kids. Danny says that the casting director picked him and Dave because they needed "two ugly ducklings to counteract all that beauty." But off-camera, Dave is very playful with Danny and the other kids—and he has a confession to make. "I really love kids," he admits.
