EXCLUSIVE

Each month read all the fan club news about the Partridge Family right here in Cecilia Bonaduce's column!

Everybody loves a wedding, right? Everybody especially loves a Partridge wedding! Now, don't get excited! David did not get married, and Susan did not get married... I got married.

It was a beautiful wedding, with five bridesmaids, ushers, best man, and an honorary best man, named Danny Bonaduce! You see, Danny was going to be the ring bearer, but we all decided that he was too old so we made up the title of "honorary best man," and Danny stood next to the best man the whole ceremony guarding our wedding bands! To tell you the truth, I think Danny had a better time than anyone, smiling and (believe it or not) giggling silently through the whole affair! The only time he got nervous was when the best man asked him for the rings... he just looked startled for a minute, because he forgot which pocket they were in!

Danny may have been the only Partridge in the ceremony, but he certainly wasn't the only Partridge attending the wedding! Shirley Jones, and her stand-in, Betty Cantu were the first Partridges to arrive at the church. Shirley wore a long burgandy gown with embroidered flowers, and she looked so pretty, that even the bride was jealous!

Speaking of jealousy, you should have seen Susan Dey! Susan looked stunning in a long lavender wrap-around knit dress, and looked so beautiful, that I was afraid that by the time I started down the aisle, it would be an anti-climax!

ALL THE Partridges are camera bugs!

Suzanne Crough and her entire family arrived just in time for the wedding, too. Unfortunately, David couldn't make it to the ceremony, but Shirley whispered to me that he'd be at the reception!

The reception, by the way, was held at my parents' home, site of the famous Christmas parties you read about every year. I have to admit that I thought this was my mother's loveliest party of all!

Mrs. Bonaduce was the perfect hostess, naturally! She wore a long chocolate-brown crepe gown with beige sleeves, and an embroidered apricot and green belt. The dress was beautiful, and was an extra attraction because mom and I swapped dresses! You see, I made my mother's dress, and I wore her wedding gown from twenty years ago! Shirley commented that she thought that was a beautiful idea, and David agreed, as he stepped into the receiving line!
