

blue." This is our fave's fave color. Though it may seem a small and unimportant thing, astrologers claim that true soulmates often groove on the same sounds and shades and tastes and textures. Blue is the color of quiet and repose — something which David needs very much in private life.

The fifth commandment: "Dig science-fiction." David enjoys reading about the worlds beyond whenever he gets the opportunity. He's tuned into ESP and he'd love practicing mind-control with the right mind.

The sixth commandment: "Be disciplined." Although like any healthy young male, David is a pleasure-seeker and a fun freak, he is also a serious worker where his career is concerned. He always arrives on "The Partridge Family" set with his lines memorized, tuned in for work. If you want to be the kind of girl David longs for, dedicate yourself to some special activity — and stick with it!

The seventh commandment: "Love flowers." David's favorite flower is the rose. It's his personal love token and he'll often give a single yellow rose to someone he wants to be close to.

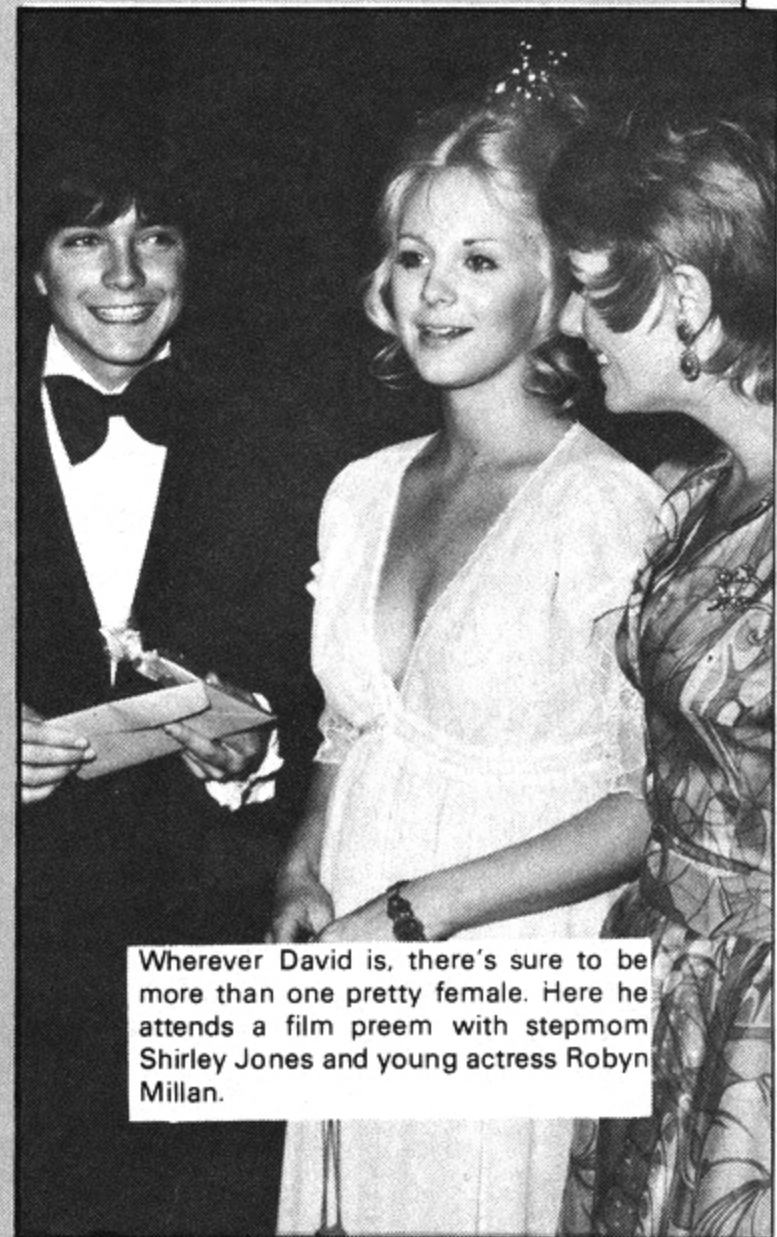

The eighth commandment: "Love animals." David is wild about dogs (especially stray puppies) and horses and goats and almost any other kind of four-legged creature. He also has strong feelings about every animal's "right to life" and, in the past, has even thought about giving up meat! So if you want to shine with David, don't order a hamburger — or worse yet wear a mink! — on a date with him.

The ninth commandment: "Love people." David thinks people are beautiful and can become even more beautiful by staying in shape physically. He himself plays lots of basketball and football off-screen. David probably wouldn't instantly dig a girl who isn't trim and tender — but she'd make lots of points with him for exercising those pounds off.

The tenth commandment: "Be generous, but also be practical." David earns more money every year than most people dream of. But earning it, he says, isn't the hard part — using it wisely is. Although his weekly "Partridge Family" salary comes to four figures, he only takes an allowance of $150! What does he do with the rest? Save it, invest it — and make charitable donations. He'd like a girl with the same cool attitude toward money.

The eleventh commandment: "Follow God's commandments and the Golden Rule." Religion is a very private thing with David. He doesn't like to talk about it much, but he does think no matter what you believe — Christianity, Buddhism or Black Magic — there is a basic moral code that all people should follow. And if you try to do good and be a tuned-in individual, you just can't help finding love!

Wherever David is, there's sure to be more than one pretty female. Here he attends a film preem with stepmom Shirley Jones and young actress Robyn Millan.
