

My Wedding Day

MICHAEL GRAY

If you know anything at all about me, then you know that I wouldn't go for a really traditional wedding day! I'm a very sentimental person, don't get me wrong, but I think some things mean more to our generation than other things meant to our folks. Things like being outdoors in the middle of nature, or having something personal, just meant for the two of us!

Because I feel that way, I'd probably want my wedding to take place in the out of doors... maybe even in a meadow filled with wildflowers! Or maybe in a beautiful garden behind my (or her) parents' home... somewhere where we can feel part of the whole world, not stuffy and really old fashioned!

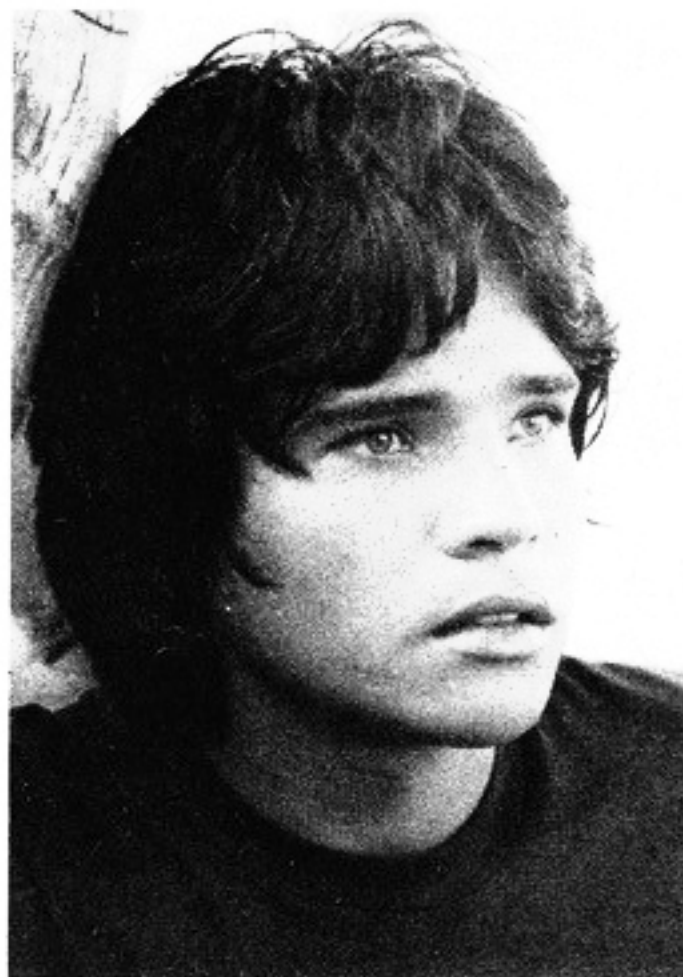

And I think my bride and I would both like to write our own ceremony. The traditional ceremony is nice, but I would want something personal to say, just to my bride, something that came from my heart! Instead of spending months and months picking out the favors for the reception, we'd spend that time writing just what we want to vow to each other.

No, I wouldn't go as far as to be barefoot or wearing old blue jeans! It's a very special and meaningful ceremony, and I would want to feel special in the way I dressed, too. Maybe it wouldn't be traditional tuxedo, but it would be an outfit that I picked out especially for my wedding day.

The girl who will be Mrs. Michael Gray would have an equal say on what goes on on our day, and I don't mean to exclude her! Maybe, when I do meet her, some of my feelings will change. But I hope that she'll enjoy the same things I do right now, and I know between the two of us that our wedding day will be one of the most memorable of our lives!

DAVID CASSIDY

Wow, this is a tough question or thought for me because, you see I really don't think about my wedding day very much. Oh, I know that someday I'll get married—and I'll be a happy man knowing that I've found my woman, but weddings, ceremonies, and rituals sort of scare me away.

I've got the feeling that when my "big day" arrives—meaning my wedding day—it'll be something that hadn't been planned for weeks ahead of time. I think I'll probably elope or something like that.

Actually, don't you think that the idea of eloping is exciting? And just think of all the fuss and bother that would be avoided. Besides, I really believe that the most important thing about a wedding is that the two people getting married are very sure about each other and the love they have for one another. If they have that, then I don't think they really need the hoopla of a big church wedding.

But let me just say that if the girl I ask to be Mrs. David Bruce Cassidy wants the big church wedding—then I'd do it because I want my wife to be happy... and that old saying is really true—if you're happy, then I'm happy too.
