LAST MINUTE NEWS...LAST MINUTE NEWS...LAST MINUTE NEWS...

Hi! I've just now finished talking to David Cassidy on the phone and his last words to me were, "Tell all your FaVE readers hello for me!" So, being the dependable person that I am--"Hello, FaVE readers--from David Cassidy!"

David was super-excited about some news, and after he told me the news I could understand his excitement. Want to share in the excitement? Then just listen to this: David, as you know, has bought some land in Hawaii. Well, now he's just started plans to build a house on his land and live in his paradise island for half the year. The other half of the year he'll still spend on the Mainland of the U.S. (to be specific, in his Encino, California, house).

DONNY VISITS

Just before his journey to and from Utah began, Donny Osmond dropped by the FaVE office and asked, "Hey, got any suggestions for my column 'Date with Donny'? I can't seem to come up with any good angles that the readers would find interesting!"

I reassured Donny that anything he had to say would capture his fans' attention and he blushed a deep red because of my compliment. He's a lot of fun to tease because he blushes so easily! Anyway, I suggested that he tell you about some of the electrical gadgets he's invented. With that suggestion, Donny's eyes lit up like two 100-watt lightbulbs and he exclaimed, "Yeah!" As a result of that brain-storm of a suggestion of mine--check out page 36 and find out just what kind of an electrical wizard Donny Osmond really is!

"IT'S MICHAEL GRAY!"

Went with Michael Gray to a children's hospital called Ranchos Los Amigos in Downey, Calif., so that he could give gifts and just chat with the children there. Michael really is remarkable with children. Some of them literally squealed, "It's him--Michael Gray from 'The Little People.'"

Michael chatted with all the kids for almost 2 hours and when we left he kept muttering, "That really makes me feel good--the kids really made me feel good!" Well, the lady who arranged for Michael to meet the kids, Mrs. Mary Blanchard, told me that Michael was one of the warmest, most sincere, and kindest celebrities to ever visit--and if he ever wanted a return visit--the doors would be open to him!

Andy and David Williams came to the office for a short interview and photo shooting. I hadn't been able to really sit down and talk to these two guys until this most recent visit--and I'm glad I did. I always thought they were really bashful and shy--they are in a way, but they're also two of the biggest nuts I've ever met!

From the moment the photo shooting began to the minute they were saying good-bye, the three of us got into this giggling fit that we couldn't shake off! No kidding, everything was funny to us. Somebody could come in and say a very unfunny sentence like, "Those lights sure are bright," and Andy, David and I would collapse and fall all over ourselves with laughter. I don't know what was making the three of us act so silly, but I've got to admit I enjoyed it. Of course, my stomach hurt from such belly-laughing, but I don't regret one single chuckle, guffaw, snicker, giggle or laugh!

At the door, the two boys turned to me and said, "This has got to be the most laugh-filled shooting ever!" I agree--and the three of us made a pact to get together for more chuckles and pictures soon. You can't miss the pix of the boys on page 14 & 15--they're delightful! And if you think I sort of like Andy & David Williams--you're sort of right! I think they're both terrific guys!

Out of room again--so soon? I've had fun telling you about my experiences--why don't you write and tell me what's been happening with YOU. I'd love to get a letter or note from you! One last message, remember you've got a friend out here in Hollywood--me! 7
