

Wednesday—

Another day, another dollar. I'm beginning to get back into the swing of things. I didn't notice yesterday how big Danny, Brian and Suzanne have gotten. Today was a fun day. We kept cracking up on the set. Danny had a line to say in a scene with me and Susan. The line was "necessity is the mother of invention." Well, just the way he said it was very funny. You had to be there. And everytime he did say it, Susan and I kept cracking up. We just couldn't help it and we had to do the scene over and over. Then Brian had to say, "If apples cost a nickel, how many can I get for a quarter?" And instead he said, "If nickels cost an apple...." Well, we screamed over that one. And then, Danny went over to Brian and said, "If you knew Brian like I know Brian, you'd get very ill!" It was one of those goofy days.

Thursday—

Hey! It's Thursday already! Things are zipping along at a pretty fast pace. I went to the movies tonight with Sam. I love movies but I don't go to too many because I can't stand crowds to begin with. And when they recognize who I am, things sometimes get out of hand. So I only go to private screenings. Think I'll spend the weekend (when it finally does come) with a special friend. Sorry, Diary, but I can't even tell you about her. Maybe later, but not right now. Man, work is O.K. but it certainly does wipe you out. Gotta get myself together by getting a good night's sleep.

Friday—

Friday at last. And it's a good Friday. No concerts or recording sessions for the weekend. I'm going away and I think I'll leave you home. But I'll be back in a day or two to tell you all about it, so don't shed any ink while I'm gone. I think I'll try to find that lazy moon I saw in Hawaii. Hope I find it. She'll like it a lot!