CAREER: For a year after graduation, he worked with the Los Angeles Theatre Group and was featured in the theatre production of 'And So To Bed'. He returned to New York, where he appeared in summer season. He also took classes at the David Geffen School of Musical Comedy and won a co-starring role in his first Broadway musical. 'The Fig Leaves Are Falling'. After the play closed, he returned to Hollywood where he guest-starred in a dramatic role in TV's 'Ironside'. Soon he was featured in The Survivors and followed that with more dramatic roles in 'Marcus Welby', 'Adam 12', 'Medical Centre', 'Mod Squad' and 'Bonanza'. 'The Partridge Family', which first appeared on ABC-TV in the winter of '71, not only propelled him to stardom, but permitted him to combine acting with another of his talents—music.

RECORDS: His recording career started with one simple Partridge Family album to help promote the TV show, but record sales grew and grew until music became the main factor in the show. Along with Shirley Jones, he sang on more than eight Partridge albums. Then David went on to record many solo hit singles and two solo albums: 'Cherish' and 'Rock Me Baby'.
