

DAVID: LOVER

DAVID WAS JUST walking out of the private screening room with his date. He noticed that her jacket, which she had flung across her shoulders, was slipping to the floor. He gallantly stooped down and retrieved it, then gently placed it back across her shoulders—all in one graceful movement. He seemed so attentive to her, so aware of his good manners, as he ushered her through the crowd and out the front door, that several whispers were heard behind him: "Boy, that David sure knows how to handle the ladies. He sure is a lover-boy!"

LONE-WOLF

SINCE THE SERIES "The Partridge Family" began in 1970, David has had to move three times (four if you count the move from his parents' house to his own first apartment) because fervent fans kept following his every move and making a daily ritual like checking out the mail a public event for David. Basically a shy guy, David likes to keep his home-life private, and so he kept house-hopping for a while. One Friday night a van parks diagonally across from David's California home. Inside are three David-diggers equipped with binoculars who are staking out his activities. As soon as they can learn something about David's lifestyle, they'll come out of the trailer and try to strike up a conversation with him at an opportune moment. Friday night uneventfully goes by. Saturday arrives and the girls take turns at the trailer's windows. The most exciting thing that
