

LOVE IS FOR TOMORROW, TOO

"Partridge" has been the greatest experience of my life. I've worked with people I love, and it'll be hard for me to stop feeling every morning that it's time to hop in my car and get on down to the set... but I had to do it. The concerts were the most overwhelming moments I've ever known, standing there and feeling that enormous burst of love come pouring from you in the audience at me. I can't tell you how much I'm going to miss it!

THE FIRST TIME

But I didn't have any choice. I know now, for the first time in my life, what I want to do forever. Not just this year, or the next, but for as long as I can do anything.

I want to make music. Good music. The best music I can possibly make.

My recording sessions for "Partridge" were always squeezed in between three other things, rushed because everybody had to be back on the set at such a time or late in starting because our filming day ran overtime. Sometimes I barely had time to learn the song—and I almost never had time to write them!

But that's not the way I want to do it. To make the best music I can, I have to live it all day long. I have to surround myself with music, breath it, sleep it, lose myself in it. And only then will I be able to make the music you deserve from me.

My music is for you. That's always been true, and it always will be. The only thing that will change, I hope, is that my music will be better and better. There may even come a time when it's worthy of you.

So don't worry about my loving you. I've loved you through all the yesterdays, and I'll love you tomorrow, too. And in my music, I'll have a way to make you feel that love.

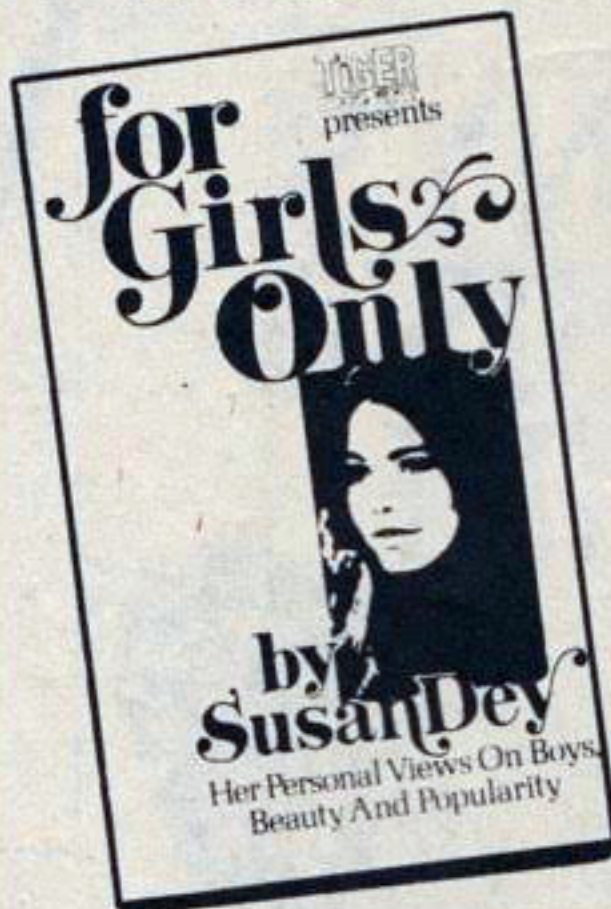

And when my music is where I want it to be, I'll probably go back to doing concerts again. And we'll be together in that way once more.

In another way, though, we're never apart. I'm living for my music now... and my music lives for you.
