

They say turnabout is fair play so this week I'd like to turn the tables on you. Week after week for months now you've been firing questions at me and I've been answering them. By now hopefully you know more about me than you did before. However, I don't think it's fair that I don't know any more about you (except what I've gathered from your questions). So now it's my turn. I have some questions I'd like to ask you. You'll find an address at the end of this column where you can send your answers—and I'll try to read each one of them. You have to promise though to be as honest with me as I have been with you. Okay?

1. What's your name and age? After all you know my name and age and probably a lot more about me. I might as well know who you are, and how old you are.

2. What other performers do you like besides me? (That's assuming you do like me! But then what would you be doing reading this column if you hated me? Huh?) Anyway I might as well know who my competition is.

3. Have you heard my latest album, 'Dreams Are Nuthin' More Than Wishes'? Did you like it? Which track did you like best? That album's a bit of a change for me and it's kind of special so I really want to know what you think of it.

4. What kind of person do you really think I am? Now be honest. I really want to know what sort of a person you think I am after all the things you've read about me. Tell me both the good and the bad!

5. What kind of person would you like me to be? If I could change in any way, how would you like me to change? What negative qualities could be changed in me? Remember, you promised to be honest! I wouldn't ask if I didn't want to know.

6. Have you changed much in the past two or three years? Can you accept the fact that I have also changed? Do the changes (in you or me) annoy or delight you?

7. Have I ever done anything that hurt you in any way? Do you think it was deliberate on my part?

8. Is there anything that you really want me to know? This is your chance to get across that one message you really want to tell me.

9. Is there anything you'd like me to do as far as movies, television or records are concerned? Have you read any books you think would make a good movie for me? Is there any type of TV show you'd like me to do? Is there any type of music you'd like to hear me do? Please tell me any ideas, or wishes you have for my career, I'm listening!

10. Is there anything I can do (within reason!) that would really mean a lot to you? Keep in mind that it's just impossible for me to personally meet every one of you. Is there anything else that perhaps I haven't thought of that I could do for you, my fans?

11. Is there anything about my stage act that you would like to see changed? Anything you'd like added? Anything you'd like left out?

12. Have you ever heard anything about me that really disturbed you? Did you find out for sure whether or not it was true? (You know if it happens again all you have to do is write to me through this column and I'll tell you the truth.)

Okay, those are my questions. I hope you were totally honest with me. I'm looking forward to your answers. Please send your replies to: David Asks You, Mirabelle, P.O. Box 21, Tower House, 8/14 Southampton Street, London, WC2E 9QX.

Many thanks and much love,

David Asks You

SOMEONE WANTS A LETTER FROM YOU!

Last Christmas I had a card from a girl I used to be great friends with at school, but when she moved away we lost touch. I must admit that receiving her card made me feel very guilty because I'd promised to write. But somehow it was always one of those things that I thought I'd put off till tomorrow. But since hearing from her we're now corresponding regularly, and I find that once I've written the first couple of lines the rest of my letter comes easily—and I really enjoy writing to her and hearing her news, too. So don't be lazy in keeping in contact with old friends... it can be very rewarding indeed. Just remember that somewhere in the world there is someone who really wants to hear from you—so do make an effort to put pen to paper.
