

I have had a lot of questions about my future plans, but I am afraid I am not the kinda person who decides things very quickly. But I have got a few ideas so keep your eyes on this column for all the facts!

Q. What kind of TV series would you like to do if you were given a choice?
—L. Douglas, Somerset.

A. Wow, that takes some thinking about. Well, I really think it would be great to star in a western series, one with a 'Butch Cassidy, and The Sundance Kid' kinda flavour. Although I think that Paul Newman and Robert Redford are probably better actors than me at the moment!

Q. What did you do last night, David? — Sandra Hamilton, Basingstoke.

A. Actually, I was very tired last night. I had some friends round and we were talking about old times. You know how it is when you start reminiscing about the past everybody keeps remembering some little thing. Then someone else says, 'Oh, I remember that' and then they start—and before you know where you are it's very late. Well, that's the kinda evening it was last night. But I wouldn't miss an evening like that because I think it's really good for people to talk about their experiences when they're together.

Although I am very tired today, I certainly enjoyed myself.

Q. What's the last present you ever bought for a girl? — Gloria Howard, London.

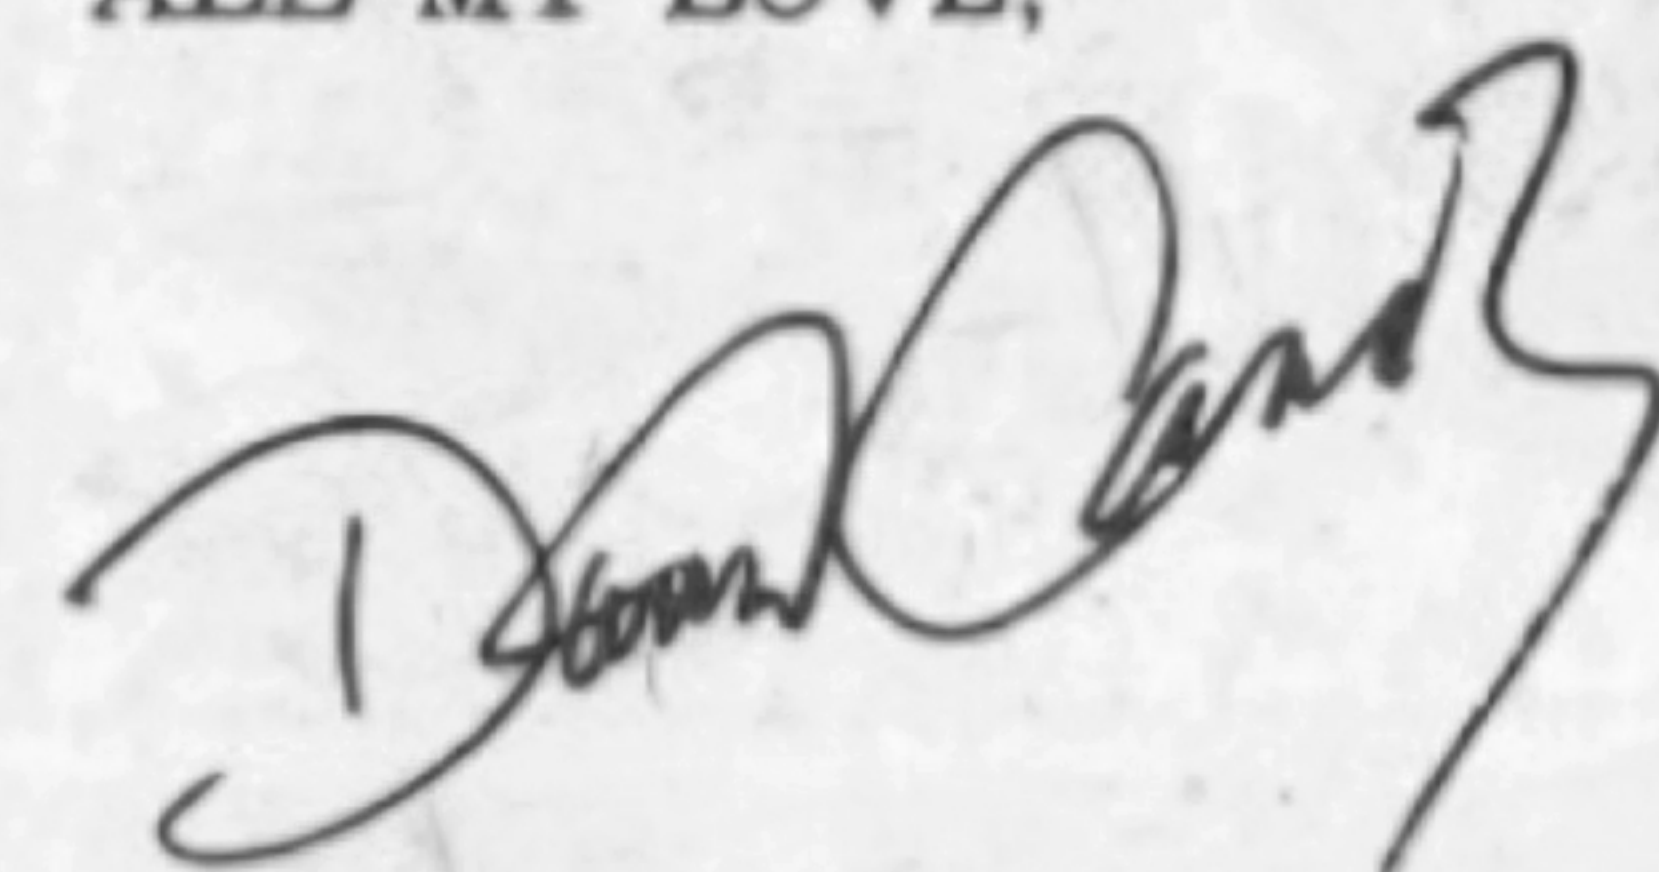

A. It was a bunch of flowers. I know this sounds corny and not a very extravagant gift, but there's something about flowers that really gets me. I've always found as well that it's not just me who likes flowers but my friends do as well. I think it is because flowers are so simple and help us to take time to remember the more beautiful things in life. It's like saying to a girl 'I think you're one of the most beautiful things in my life'. Actually the girl in question on the last occasion I bought flowers was my mother. Gosh, I hope she's reading this she'll be really flattered that I've called her a girl. But then she's young at heart and that's what really matters, isn't it? As it happens this bunch of flowers wasn't for any special occasion, but just to let my mother know that I was thinking about her. Why don't you give someone special in your life a nice surprise this week? If they enjoy it as much as my mother did then you'll also be making someone very happy. And that can't be bad, can it? You just could find that you'll also feel happier, too. You don't necessarily have to give a present to that special someone, either. One of the best ways to make that special person happy is just to smile at them. It really works!

Well, that about winds it up for this week, Mirabelle readers. Hope to meet you here next week.

friends. The same thing happened the next day, but this time the dog's super owner said 'hello' to me and we walked along together. Now I meet him every day and we have a nice chat. So I don't mind taking my dog for walks any more!

THE BOY I LOVE

Maybe in time I will find someone new, I doubt it very much as I am still in love with you. You walk past me as if I am not there. One day you will notice and your regrets will pay. Someone will do the same to you and I cannot wait for that day.
