

DAVID STORMED ONTO THE STAGE

David Cassidy, three-time Golden Otto winner, is consistently pursuing his path to becoming a genuine international rock star who also wants to be taken seriously because of his music.

Our poster of David's live performance was created at an Eric Carmen concert at the Roxy Theatre in Hollywood. Together with Shaun Cassidy and his friend Gerry Beckley from the Together with Shaun Cassidy and his friend Gerry Beckley from the group "America", David sat in the audience. During the last few songs, David and Gerry couldn't stay in their seats any longer. They spontaneously jumped on stage and played and sang along to "That's Rock'n'Roll", "Be my Baby" and "Please go all the Way". "It was wonderful," said David afterwards, "I hadn't felt this good for a long time."

At the moment, David is in the process of putting together a band. He really wants to play live again. "But I don't really want to go on tour," says David, "I'm attracted by what Paul McCartney did in England. Just turn up in a city, in a hall and then play. Without a lot of preparation and wheeling and dealing."

By the way, David has finished his new LP "Home is where my Heart is". It will be released in March. In April, he'll be back in the studio and then David might shoot a feature film for the cinemas...

At a concert by Eric Carmen (left) in Hollywood, Gerry Beckley (center) and David Cassidy spontaneously climbed on stage to sing and play along