No, I'm not retiring.

David's first and so far only meeting with the entire Scandinavian press took place at Kastrup Airport. He was at the top of his game, witty and well-dressed and in an appearance - those cut-off denims and knee socks that we'll see all other young guys in next year - that made him seem younger than ever, even though he's busy telling us how tired he was of being considered a 16-year-old schoolboy. Today, he still loves to use his boyish charm, but that he felt a fantastic relief at finally, after 3 and a half years, letting go of Keith Partridge. And when he talked about quitting and that this was his last tour, it was actually mostly Keith Partridge he said goodbye to - not David Cassidy. No, I'm not retiring, he said. I will continue to sing, play and write. I'm going to do a TV special and I know I have at least one album left in me. I just want to grow and do things I haven't done before. I hope people will grow with me. If you don't grow, your career dies. I think I'm going to have a hard time, people will turn away from me - but to be honest, now I only want to think about myself! Well David - so far your fan base is growing day by day. And now it's not just young girls, but also boys and adults!

P.S. David was genuinely upset about not being allowed to perform in Norway. A concert was arranged at the stadium in Oslo, but the authorities were afraid for the fans' safety.
