

The weeny-boppers go wild for pop idol David

THIS IS WHAT sends the weeny-boppers into ecstasies—American pop idol David Cassidy in action at the Empire Pool, Wembley today.

Fans, who began to queue at 7 a.m. for the mid-day concert, screamed and yelled as he sang. The resident nurse and her five colleagues went round the hall with damp sponges to cool down the hysterical.

Two girls jumped about eight feet from the Grand Tier and were carried weeping from the concert. One was allowed back, but the other, who bit a security man's hand, was shut out.

Earlier, there were wild scenes at Broadcasting House, where Cassidy appeared on the Ed Stewart Junior Choice programme. When he appeared at a window, girls climbed scaffolding to get a close look at their idol.

There is a further concert at Wembley tonight and two more tomorrow.
