POP star David Cassidy dodged his teenybopper fans yesterday during a hush-hush visit to a music shop.

The 23-year-old American singer, pictured above, had told the shop manager that if there were any fans around, he would drive straight past.

In fact his car circled the block three times before David dived into the music shop in London's West End.

He autographed a £150 guitar which actor Roger Moore is to raffle for charity, but called off a tour of the shop.

Mr. Ivor Arbiter,

managing director of CBS-Arbiter, which owns the shop, said: "He said he could not see photographers because of his spots."

David had flown to London early yesterday to record an interview for the 500th edition of the BBC-TV show "Top of the Pops."

Officials at Heathrow Airport praised his quiet arrival.
