

SILENT WORSHIP

Gail Bradey (15) left her waitressing job in Dunedin for a pilgrimage to Auckland to see her pop star idol, David Cassidy. Today Gail, together with five other Auckland girls (pictured above), whose ages range from 12 to 15, kept vigil outside the Auckland hotel where Cassidy is staying. Gail, much to the envy of the other girls at the airport got to meet and hug Cassidy, who returned her welcome with a handshake. The fans had missed breakfast and left home at 6 a.m. to see him arrive. Why had they trailed Cassidy? "Because we love him," they chorussed. And what did they do after their vigil at the hotel? Went home to watch father Jack Cassidy who appeared as a guest artist in "The Julie Andrews Hour" on TV.

● The Cassidy show has been transferred from Eden Park on Tuesday night to two shows at the Town Hall on Wednesday because the weather looks as though it is breaking up.
